Students protest film ban

BY KEN VOYLES

They were all there. Squids, jocks, dexters, geeks, burnouts and some other less exotic student groups.

The usual social barriers were abandoned Thursday, and, just as in the movie "The Breakfast Club," Centennial Education Park (CEP) students from differing sub-cultures or cliques found common cause with each other.

Nearly 200 of them from both Canton and Salem gathered in the upper commons at Salem to find out what they could do to fight the Plymouth-Canton School Board's decision to ban the showing of the film

"The Breakfast Club." Also on hand, but only to listen were some teachers and concerned adults.

It was a mixed bag of students. There were those with wild spike hair styles and football players still-wearing their muddy practice jerseys. Others came with notepads and cameras to record the meeting and still others found it the "in" thing to do on what would otherwise have been a dull Thursday afternoon.

For the students it was a lesson in organization -- one they were eager to learn despite their different backgrounds and caste-like social groupings.

"The decision to ban the movie is a slap in the face to students and teachers," one of the organizers of the meeting explained. "The point of this meeting is to get organized and fight the board's decision."

A pair of Canton seniors, Angie Schlagheck and Tim Strauss, called the meeting and were a little more than surprised by the response of their fellow students.

"We're rather serious about this," Schlagheck said. "This may be a precedent setting move by the board and we want to stop it."

Schlagheck said there were mostly

The force behind the film ban speaks out

Who is Diane Daskalakis and why is she after the Plymouth-Canton School Board to ban so-called offensive movies from the classroom?

The 39-year-old Plymouth Township resident is fighting to ban movies like "The Breakfast Club," "The Sword and the Sorcerer," "Ghostbusters," "Teen Wolf," and "Excalibur," because there is an "overall theme of teaching the occult and the powers of hell" in them.

"Many parents told me they were frustrated over their children being shown R-rated and occult type movies at school," she said.

The store owner and unsuccessful board candidate is trying to "unite" parents, she says, who feel the same way she does and represent those parents who cannot attend meetings or find out about what is taught with their tax dollars.

"We all censor daily what comes in our homes by what we buy, the magazines we order, the books we buy, the TV shows we watch and the friends our children choose," she wrote in a written response to questions from The Crier last week.

She continued, "Free speech is one of the great freedoms of this country; but, if I disagree with what an individual is saying or teaching I want the right to get away from them and not accept their ideas."

Daskalakis became a born-again Christian six years after battling diabetes and a heart defect for 22 years.

"Six years ago, through only a slight knowledge of Jesus through TV ministries I asked Jesus to forgive me of my sins and I forgave others who had sinned against me.

"I asked my Father to help me," she added. "Instantly, I received a deliverance from the desire to smoke or drink which helped my general health drastically."

Before that time she said she was unable to quit smoking or learn to handle alcohol. She also suffered back problems, respiratory trouble and allergies.

After a three-year "walk" with Jesus Christ, Daskalakis said she was "delivered from diabetes" during a church service.

She says she doesn't suggest Christianity for all people but she is against forcing believers to learn something that might jeopardize their place in heaven.

"I censor or weed out the material that I find offensive," she said. "Newspapers pick and choose before they go to press."

Teacher will speak

Canton teacher Dudley Barlow has written a request to be put on the agenda of the Monday, Oct. 27 Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education meeting to discuss the censoring of the film "The Breakfast Club."

Barlow, an English teacher who received permission to show the film in his class a few days before it was banned, will be on the agenda under the "citizen's comments" section of the meeting.

Barlow also requested, along with a student, Angie Schlagheck, that the meeting be moved to Salem's auditorium to accommodate a larger audience.

That request was turned down, according to Superintendent John M. Hoben's office.

The only option a member of the public has to get on one of the board's agenda is under "citizen's comment." All other agenda items are placed before the board by the administration or other board members.

If interested individuals wish to speak before the board they must fill out a card at the meeting to be recognized by the board president.

Geer may re-open for unique historical classes

BY KEN VOYLES

Geer School might yet be restored. Saving the 157-year-old single room schoolhouse on Plymouth and Gotfredson roads in Superior Township was a topic at Monday's Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education workshop.

Closed since 1982, the school is rapidly deteriorating, according to George Dodson, one of 11 committee members who are heading up a possible drive to bring Geer back to life.

"If we wait too long we'll lose a piece of history," said Dodson, the last instructor at the school to teach the combination grades of fourth, fifth and sixth, and current principal of Gallimore.

According to Superintendent John M. Hoben, the district has passed up opportunities to sell the property since the school was shut down in 1982. He also said the district considered making it a demonstration school at one time. Monday.

The recently formed Geer School committee feels, according to member Shirley Spaniel, that the school should be restored to its Victorian elegance and opened to fourth and fifth graders

CEP Band to defend state title Sat.

BY KEN VOYLES

Watch the Centennial Education Park (CEP) marching band get ready for a weekend competition on some Saturday afternoon.

Besides the very social air to the gathering of 158 Canton and Salem musicians waiting to board their buses one can't help but notice the discipline and organization that underlies the program and drives the students.

"It's a good program," Band Director James Griffith said. "The parents are good, the staff is good and the kids are good."

"You put a good staff like ours together with a bunch of kids who want to do it and get the parents involved and you create a positive program all the way."

That positive attitude is written across the band members faces as they load on to four buses, carrying extra clothes, and assorted munchies and refreshments for the long ride.

Last weekend it was to Durand for the Durand Invitational Marching Band competition. The CEP marchers won the Grand Champion Trophy (their fifth straight), returning home late Saturday night.

And that was after playing before the crowd at the Salem-Westland John Glenn football game on Friday night.

"Weekends are a lot of fun," said George Markley, a Canton senior and trombone player. "Being with each other -- that's the fun of it all."

Markley has played with the band for four years. He especially likes this year because of a "better" attitude by the band members.

"We're trying our best to get in the national finals," he said.

Other band members resound with the same thoughts.

"I like the people mostly," said Canton junior tuba player Mike on a rotating basis.

The school would be refurbished and students would be allowed to attend a one-week session there dressed in the manner of the period when Geer was at its height.

During the summer months it might be used for special classes or as a setting for special events.

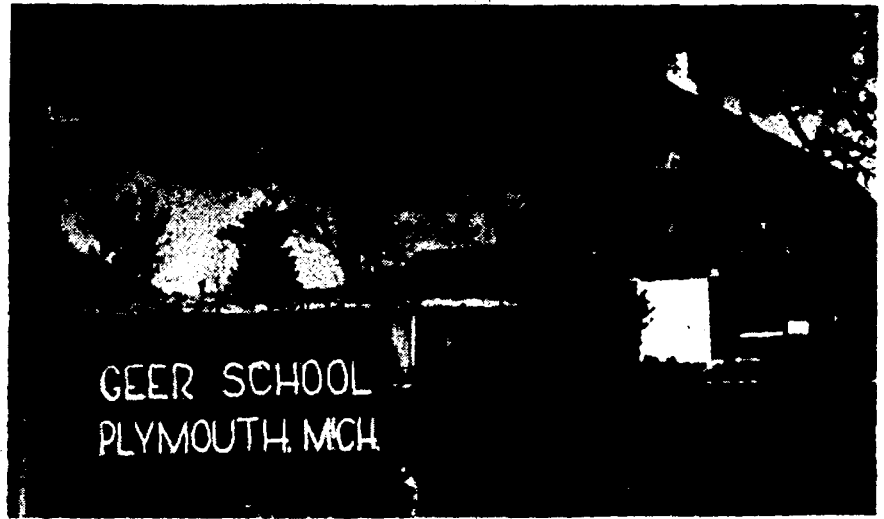

But before that could happen the school needs renovation at an as yet unspecified cost. The floors are damaged, as are the walls and heating units, but more importantly the roof leaks.

"Every time it rains we lose money because the school gets damaged," Dodson said. "Our first priority should be the roof."

Funding the project might come from community groups, according to Spaniel, or other historical organizations devoted to saving such structures.

"We think there are local groups who would want to get involved," she said. "There is a lot of enthusiasm on our committee, and we didn't envision the use of general fund money to restore it. We're talking about community support."

Board member Roland Thomas said, "I want to make sure that if we do this

Geer School, on Ann Arbor And Gotfredson roads, may be refurbished by the Plymouth-Canton School District. (Crier photo by T.M. Smith)

we're committed to it so that when the next budget crunch comes this isn't the first thing to go."

Thomas cited the school farm and sixth grade camp as examples of previous programs that seemed highly desirable but later fell to the budget cutting axe.

"We also let the school on Canton Center deteriorate too far," Board President E.J. McClendon said. "This time we can't close our eyes."

McClendon directed Hoben to start the administrative staff working on a proposal that would detail costs, uses and responsibilities and submit it back to the board in the near future.

Geer became a part of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools in 1965.

Stutzman. "It's a lot fun, especially the bus rides to the competitions every weekend."

Stutzman, who is also employed at the Steak & Ale, said playing with the band takes a lot of commitment, almost as much as that of varsity athletes at CEP.

"We practice every day and compete every weekend," he said. "But everyone pretty much gets along with each other."

Kevin Phail, a freshmen trumpet player also enjoys the fellowship of the band. "The weekends are like a small vacation," he said. "We are serious about it but we have fun also."

Cathy Notestine, a Canton senior clarinet player, enjoys the feeling she gets when it all comes together on the field. "It feels great to do a good job," she said. "And it's exciting seeing the other bands and competing against them."

Notestine is also a member of the CEP Latin club and secretary to the National Honors Society. And she plays under Griffith with the school's Symphony Band.

A new member of the band, Lisa Tilley, a Salem senior and keyboard specialist, said it's hard to describe what makes playing with the band such a rewarding experience.

"I don't march but I sit there and watch them and it boggles my mind," she said. "Everything comes together. It's neat."

"They like to do well," Griffith said of his charges. "That's probably the key. It's not just a social thing for the kids. They want to excell."

Perhaps one of the band's highlights was playing before President Ronald Reagan when he visited Detroit recently.

"It was very exciting," Griffith said. "Even for a man my age. As bland as you'd like to think it might have been, it wasn't."

"The kids handled themselves very well that day," he added.

Griffith, who has been leading the band for "too long," works with a staff of nine but also gets a lot of booster support from parents and the community.

In November, the band will compete in the Marching Bands of America Grand Nationals at Indianapolis and already Griffith has sold 225 tickets to interested parents.

But before that the marchers host the annual Michigan Competing Band Directors Marching Band competition at CEP this Saturday, Oct. 25. The all day event kicks off at 10 a.m. There will be 27 bands on hand.

Tickets are $4 in advance and $6 at the gate. Advance tickets are available in Plymouth at Sideways on Forest Avenue and the Trading Post on Ann Arbor Road.

The band has been defending state champion since 1984.

Guenther clock here soon

BY T.M. SMITH

A Victorian four-faced town clock, which was hand built in Arkansas, is expected to be delivered to Plymouth and in place in Kellogg Park in the next two weeks.

Harold Guenther, who is donating the clock in memory of his son Peter Guenther, said the makers of the clock called Monday and said the clock was nearly complete, and should be delivered sometime in the next two weeks.

Monday workmen were finishing the fieldstone base at the edge of Kellogg Park, on Main Street. When the clock arrives it will be placed on that pedestal.

Guenther ordered the handmade clock early this year as a memorial to his son, who died last year. He said the clock is devoted out of love and pride.

"We tried to keep this family orientated," Guenther said. "But it is more than a memorial, it is a symptom of pride in this community."

Sitting on the base, the clock will stand more than 20 feet high, it will have a face on all four sides, and chime on the hour.

It was completed in Russellville, AK By Herwig Lighting, and Guenther said it will be very similar to the clock in place in Northville.

The clock was scheduled to be in Plymouth early this Fall, but Guenther said there have been some delays along the way, but it should be in place by the end of October.

Building in Plymouth has skyrocketed in 1986

F BY T.M. SMITH
 For an outsider looking in, the City of Plymouth might not appear to be the most opportune place to build in the area.

With bulging city boundaries, and what looks like very little vacant land, Plymouth might not appear to be a place to start a new home or apartment complex.

These are the appearances.

But appearances can be deceiving, and builders have proven this cliché true where the city is concerned.

With nine months of the year on the books, Plymouth is on a path for its most productive building year in history.

Imaginative and inventive builders have logged more than $7 million worth of building on the books to date, with some of the most productive looking months probably still ahead.

During 1985 there was a little less than $1.5 million worth of building in the city.

City Manager Henry Graper said the combined effect of low interest and mortgage rates along with the fear of the new tax bill have coupled to "make a good year for building into a great year."

City Engineer Ken West said these rates, and creative builders and homeowners have made this a banner year in Plymouth.

"This is really extraordinary for a city like Plymouth. One of the things that has really amazed me is that it seemed like the city limits were fully developed, but people still found some space this year," West said.

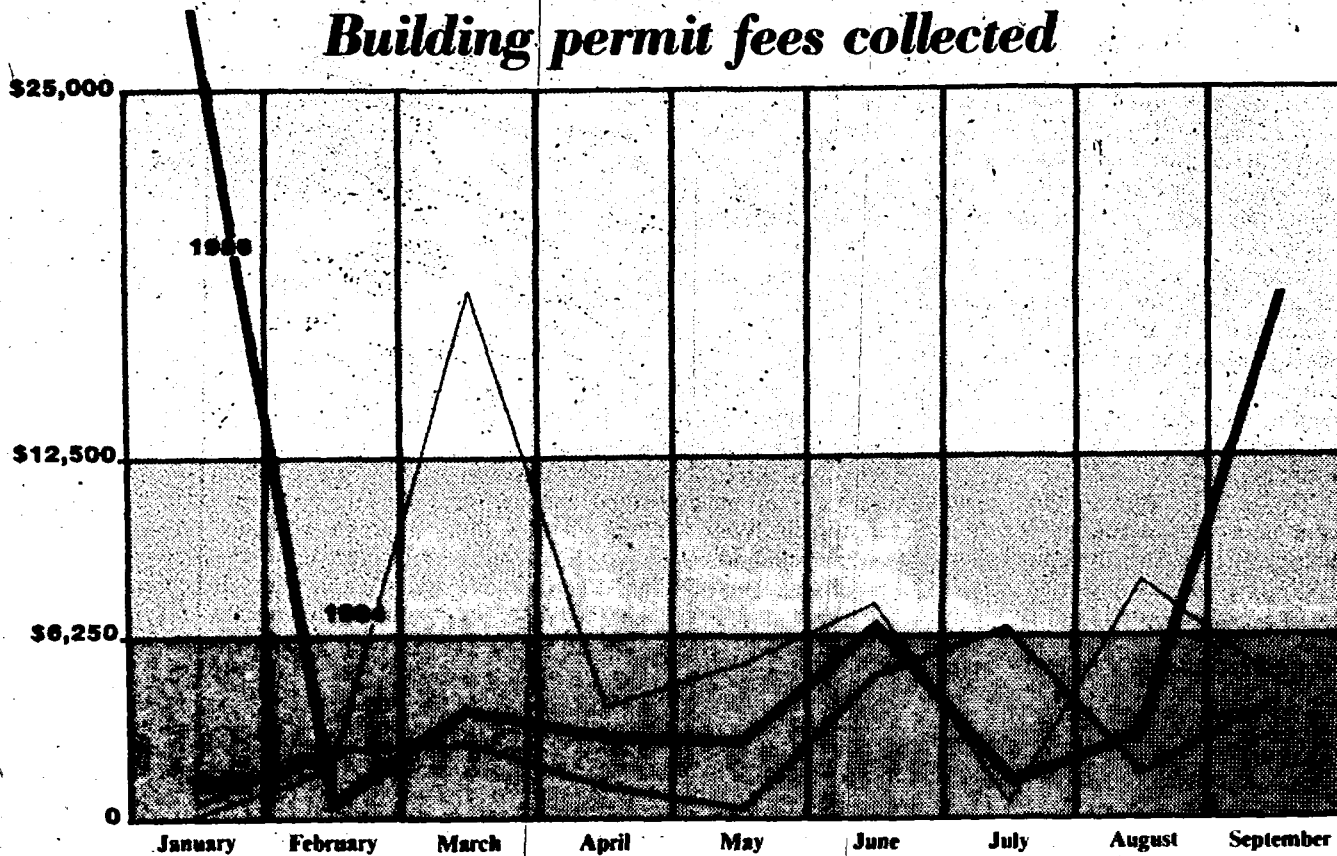

Some of the biggest uses for small amounts of property came in the form of apartment and condominium projects this year.

With several projects going on Ann Arbor Trail, on both sides of Mill Street, and several other projects that are yet to make it on city books, figures higher than $10 million are very possible.

"I don't think our biggest month is in yet," West said. "When we get a couple of the projects on the books that are waiting, this will be our biggest year by far."

Some of the projects that have yet to show on the books include a David Allen condominium project on Ann Arbor Trail, east of Mill. West said that 120 units are planned to go in there, and that they could be estimated in the neighborhood of $4 to $5 million. He also said the Wilcox project and the Jabara condominiums have not shown anywhere on the books yet, and he expects both of those in before the year is through.

Graper agreed that the addition of these projects for this year would be icing on the cake. "If we can get some of the others like Wilcox and Jabara it would be fantastic," he said.

The line chart plots the fees collected in Plymouth between Jan.-Sept. for the last three years.

All of this building activity, being put in relatively small spaces, is a credit to the builders West said.

"I think it really shows the ingenuity of the property owners and builders to make the maximum use of their property," West said.

Graper added that it is an indicator of the market currently under foot.

"As people drive along everybody sees the sideyards and assumes it is the same lot, but many times someone can make an offer and buy an entire lot just being used," he said.

This major increase in building will have many positive effects for Plymouth in the future.

One of the easiest yard sticks to use is the amount of money collected by the building department.

This year fees collected have jumped to $70,000 in the first nine months, compared to $27,000 collected in 1985 -- which by the way was thought to be a good year.

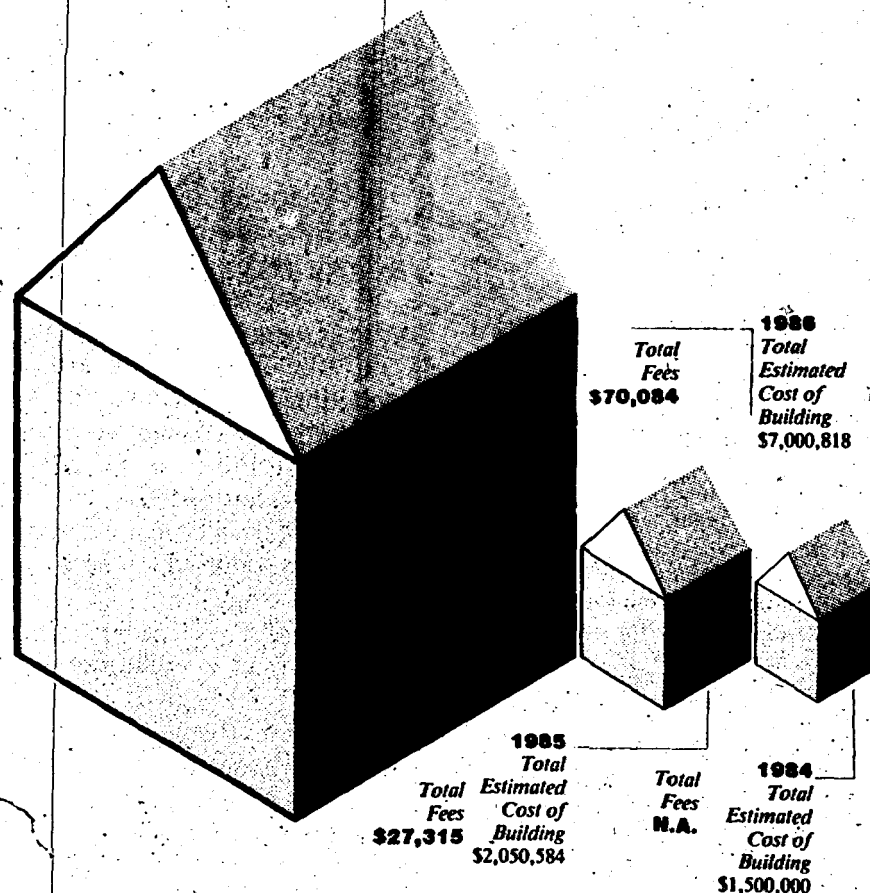

"The last three years have been good, we would have been disappointed if this wasn't a good year, but we had no idea it would be this big," Graper said.

In January alone, the fees collected were more than for the first nine months of 1985. There was $28,025 collected that month.

Graper also said that this building will have a positive effect on the tax base of the city.

"About 50 per cent of the new building will be absorbed by old buildings losing value, but I think we can expect at least $1 million to be added to the tax base," he said.

41st season

PSO wins in opener

BY P.D. MORSE

If you were not at the opening night of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra last Friday, Oct. 17, then you missed a demonstration of the adage, "Life begins after 40."

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leon Gregorian in his debut as conductor for the 1986-87 concert season, gave an invigorating performance to the nearly packed Salem auditorium at CEP.

unusually complex piece and requires some effort on the part of the listener to follow it. However, it is powerful music and Votapek's performance was magnificent. It is a tribute to him and the orchestra that the audience gave him a standing ovation, a rare event in this community for music of this modern flavor.

After the intermission, the orchestra played Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F-minor. The orchestra has played this piece before, but its performance on Friday was far superior to its previous attempts. After a rough start, the orchestra played with conviction and precision, especially in the difficult fourth movement, which Gregorian took at full tempo. In the past, the orchestra would have faltered, but not this time. This was a credible and enjoyable performance.

Gregorian has given us a glimpse of what the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra can do. The glimpse is tantalizing. He has challenged the community with serious music and is developing the orchestra to perform it well. As one player put it, "We weren't just playing notes, we were playing music."

The remainder of the season appears equally impressive and enjoyable. Buy your tickets soon! If the orchestra keeps up the good work, they will be a bargain.

The program was bold and daring for this orchestra. It began with three excerpts from Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," including an excellent rendition of the well-known Rakoczy March. After this spirited opening, the evening's guest artist, Ralph Votapek, gave a stunning performance of Prokofiev's Concerto No. 2 in C-minor for piano and orchestra.

This piece is not played often, but should be better known. Written in 1913 and revised in 1922, it is an

Drain office fate up to the voters

BY DANNESS

"Shall the Wayne County Home Rule Charter be amended to eliminate the office of the Drain Commissioner effective Jan. 1, 1987, and further to separate and distribute the powers and duties of a drain commissioner between the executive and legislative branches in accordance with the general design of the charter?"

Voters in The Plymouth-Canton Community will face that question on Tuesday, Nov. 4.

Called Proposal D, the ballot proposal was initiated by 11th District County Commissioner Milton Mack, and co-sponsored by five other commissioners.

The ballot proposal's supporters say the office of the drain commissioner has no system of checks and balances and that cost overruns, a lack of competitive bidding and a financial record-keeping system in disarray are reasons voters should support the elimination of the office, currently held by Charles Youngblood.

Opponents to Proposal D say the office should not be changed from an elected post, and if there are problems in the office, the voters can decide to elect someone else.

"I don't care who holds that office," Mack said, "the office has too much power. I don't think any office should have that much power."

Mack said passage of Proposal D would lower drain cleaning costs, establish limitations on taxing and spending for drain work, eliminate duplication of services, eliminate confusion and waste in performing duties in drain work, and spur economic development and growth in Wayne County.

Under the proposed charter amendment, the administrative duties would be taken over by the county executive's office and duties of the office would be taken over by the county's department of public works. All actions taken in drain work would also have to be approved by the county commission.

Mack said the drain commissioner's office cleaned four drain systems in Wayne county at a cost of nearly $100,000 per mile of drain cleaned. The county's department of public services could do the same work for about $30,000 per mile of drain, Mack said.

Mack said, because there is a "lack of checks and balances," that the drain commissioner has given jobs to contractors without bidding for the lowest cost, and that the financial records of the office were so disorganized that an accounting firm hired to audit the office could not perform an audit because of lack of records.

Opponents of Proposal D have pointed to other county's drain commissioner offices, such as Washtenaw County, as examples that the present system can work. Mack, however, said that comparisons between Wayne and Washtenaw county were not fair. He said in Washtenaw County, the drain commissioner's actions affected nearly all of the county's citizens, while in Wayne County, the drain commissioner's actions only affected those residents outside of Detroit.

Mack called it "bad practice" to combine the executive and legislative functions in one office, as it now stands. "The drain commissioner knows he can do anything he wants to do and get away with it -- and he does," Mack said.

Heintz, Kopka vie for 10th Dist. seat

BY T.M. SMITH

The vacant seat being left by Mary Dumas in the 10th District of the Wayne County Commissioners race, is a contest between experience and non-experience.

On the Republican ticket will be Susan Heintz, who edged out two other candidates in the August primary. Under the Democratic heading will be John Kopka, who ran unopposed in the primary.

Heintz is currently the supervisor of Northville Township, and brings a long list of committees, boards and political events as experience.

Kopka is employed as a master technician at Eaton Corporation, and is a newcomer to the political arena.

The person elected will sit on the 15-member board of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners and help direct the Wayne County Executive.

Both candidates agreed that one of the biggest issues facing the commissioners in the coming year would be the reduction of the deficit the county has mounted in recent times.

Kopka said this problem could partly be solved by approaching the deficit the way a business would.

"I think government should operate under the same guidelines, and use the same concessions as a business would. Some non-essential programs should be eliminated," Kopka said.

Heintz said much of the deficit could be eased some by the sale of property.

"I am an advocate of the sale of county-owned property, there is a surplus that we have that we could sell," Heintz said. "There are also many cost-saving programs such as indigent health care that need to be looked at."

Kopka said the three major issues he will work on as a commissioner, if elected, would be the deficit, a review of the job force within the county and a county commission set up for the people.

"The present commission is in far too much turmoil, things have happened in the recent past which has given the commission a bad name," Kopka said.

Heintz listed her three major objectives in office as, first working on the infrastructure of the county, secondly attempting to solve the deficit and thirdly the removing of the drain commissioner's office in Wayne County.

"I really believe that a solid infrastructure in very important to a successful county. We need work on the roads, hospitals and services of the county," Heintz said.

Both Kopka and Heintz agreed that the office of drain commissioner should be eliminated, and said if they sat on the commission they would have voted for the the removal of that office.

(A proposal has been placed on this ballot, for Wayne County voters to decide if the drain commissioner's office should be eliminated)

"That office is not accountable to anyone, he is a czar, and I can't understand how he prevailed so long," Kopka said.

Heintz said that if elected she would step down as supervisor of Northville Township and assume full-time duties as a commissioner, while Kopka said that he would continue to keep his present position with Eaton Corporation.

Both candidates said they were not in support of a recent commission decision to raise pay in the county, including the commissioners annual salary.

Kopka said he would definitely vote "no" for raises for county commissioners, but that he would have to look at the full-time employes and consider each circumstance.

Heintz said that she would have voted "no" across the board and "that as long as the county is in the financial problems they are in, that the county could not give any pay increases."

The voting records of the candidates are: Heintz has voted 27 times since registering in 1972, while Kopka has voted 18 times since registering in Livonia in 1972.

37th District Dist. pits Kosteva against Jacques

BY DANNESS

Voters in the 37th District, which includes part of Canton, will choose between Democrat incumbent State Rep. James Kosteva, of Canton, and Republican Theodore Jacques, of Romulus.

"I'm confident of the job I've done," said Kosteva.

"Our current representative is not representing the district, I feel," Jacques said.

Kosteva said his main priority if re-elected would be to reduce the "property tax burden" and restructure the method of funding schools in the state at the same time. He would support a decrease in the property tax, and an increase in the state sales tax, but add utilities to the exemptions of the sales tax.

Kosteva said that using only property taxes for funding schools made too much of an inequity between the quality in school districts. "It makes too much of a difference if you're born in Belleville or in Bloomfield," Kosteva said.

Jacques said he opposed additional state money going to fund school districts. "I believe in local control, not state control," he said. "I don't want to see the right of the people to fund their school districts taken over by the state."

Jacques said he would favor a property tax system where senior citizens would only pay property tax only on an amount over $25,000. If a senior owned a $45,000 home, they would pay tax on $20,000 of that home, Jacques said. He also said he would favor the lowering of the state income tax "even below what it was four years ago." State government administrative cuts would be where the money could be recouped, Jacques said.

Both candidates are opposed to state-funded abortions, and both support a law requiring deposits on wine coolers.

Kosteva, who sponsored Gov. James Blanchard's college tuition guarantee bill, said it would "bring the middle class, and even the lower-middle class into the ball game," of college education. Under the program, residents pay a lump sum of a varying amount (like term insurance) depending on how old their children are. The money is invested by the state, and when the child is old enough to attend college, he or she can go to a state-college of their choice and pay no tuition (because the parents had already paid once).

Jacques called the bill "a terrible piece of legislation," and said it left too many unanswered questions. "The state's not supposed to be out there competing with the banks and savings and loans," he said. Jacques said, instead, parents who invest in an education savings program should be given a tax break, like the IRA program.

Kosteva said, other than the property tax relief, his other priorities in the legislature are dealing with the solid waste and toxic waste issues, and to rebuild the state's infrastructure -- the roads, bridges, sewers, etc.

Jacques said other priorities of his are developing stiffer penalties for drunk drivers and making mandatory sentences for criminals.

Both candidates have voted in nearly all of the elections held in their respective communities.

Geake, Healy battle for Senate seat

BY KEN VOYLES

It's a question of experience and seniority versus "new blood" in the Michigan Senatorial 6th District race as incumbent Republican R. Robert Geake, of Northville Township, faces Democrat Thomas H. Healy, of Plymouth.

Geake, a state senator since 1977, seeks to gain his fifth return to the state body, while Healy, a private attorney with 25 years serve in the community, hopes to un lodge him and win his first seat.

The 6th district includes The Plymouth-Canton Community, Livonia, Redford and Northville.

Although also opposed to abortions morally (like Geake), Healy supports Medicaid funding on the principle of equal rights.

"This is a rights and constitutional question," he said. "I'm opposed to abortions but as long as they are legal in this country one section of the society shouldn't be denied their rights because of a lack of resources."

On the insurance-liability awards question (for pain and suffering) Healy says no amount of money can "alleviate the situation or take away the pain."

He added, "We shouldn't cap pain and suffering awards. If you haven't construction and of economic development are the number one priorities facing the state and his district, while Healy zeroes in on property tax relief and what he calls "certainty of punishment" for criminals.

"We need to do more than just lock people up. That's not the total answer," Geake said. "But jails have to be a priority."

If jails are to continue to be built Geake feels they should be constructed near built-up areas to make it less of a hardship on the criminals families.

The incumbent would also like to make better use of probation program:

and start them working under the supervision of skilled tradesmen," he said.

Mandatory sentences for those prisoners would provide "certainty" of punishment. "I think if a kid spends just one week in jail he'd learn a lesson that could turn him around."

Geake said he feels their has been a change in the old cliché that the Democratic party is the party "of the people."

"That may have been true at one time," he said. "But we have worked hard to broaden our base," he said. "I'm for limited government. The state shouldn't get involved in areas that are the property of local units of government."

"I believe my voting record consistently reflects that view," added Geake.

Healy said, "We're still the party of the people. We have more fights within our party over what is the proper way to represent the people. We're also the people who say it's necessary to support welfare programs for those we need it."

"I think the Republicans are beginning to recognize the need for that, but I also think it's a 'me too' approach," he said. "They still basically support private interests."

Geake rebutted, however, that he has been instrumental in helping the district get money through revenue sharing, for the local race tracks and in the area of mental health.

Healy responded, "Mr. Geake has been in Lansing for a long time and he hasn't take the kind of initiative on issues important to the people. He doesn't stand up and argue for the people of the district."

Geake has been a registered voter in Northville Township since 1962 and has voted in all elections held (at least 44).

Healy has voted in all elections held in Plymouth since registering in 1962.

Although not diametrically opposed on every issue, the two candidates do seem to fall along very partisan lines, enough so to heat up what otherwise might be a bland district clash.

"I'm the incumbent and that gives me some seniority," Geake said. "I'm better able to serve the community having been in the House of Representatives and Senate for 14 years."

"I think I do show a great deal of initiative," he added. "My experience in Lansing is a plus for this district."

Initiative, or a lack of it, is one of the main reasons Healy decided to run this year, he said. "That's definitely part of the question," he explained. "It's also a question of leadership. I don't think Mr. Geake has taken the initiative and represented this community well."

"It's time for a change, for new blood," he continued.

Besides differing on the very subjective question of leadership, the pair also disagree greatly on three issues -- Medicaid funding for abortions, caps on pain and suffering awards and bottle deposits.

"I'm strongly opposed to Medicaid funding for abortions," Geake said at a League of Women Voters Forum in Livonia last week. "We shouldn't talk about anyone's rights but those of the baby."

suffered you're not in a position to judge what those people experience."

Healy called the product liabilities problem an "insurance company crisis" and not a tort crisis.

Geake, however, is strongly opposed to unlimited awards for what he called "non-economic" damages. "I voted for the cap of $250,000," he said.

Geake also voted for the 10-cent bottle deposit on wine coolers and would have liked to see it implemented sooner than in 1988.

"I wanted immediate effect," he said. "It's important to get the system rolling."

Healy is fundamentally opposed to any kind of deposit law for "health reasons." But he said that as long as we regulate beer and pop cans and bottles we should do the same for wine coolers.

Geake feels that the issues of jail and look at some form of restitution program for victims of crime.

"I also believe in private ownership of handguns for the honest citizens," said Geake.

If elected Healy said he would fight for property tax relief and a possible increase in the credit one receives for income taxes.

"This state needs property tax relief badly," he said. "I think we could make up the funds if banks paid their fair share of business taxes."

"County crime problems certainly effect us in this district," Healy continued. "If we have any deterrent to crime it has to be punishment, certainty of punishment. What I'm talking about is jail."

Healy would like to see jails constructed in mid-Michigan, maybe even by the prisoners themselves. "We set them up with sleeping bags and tents

Law faces Reilly in 36th District

BY T.M. SMITH

Michigan's State House 36th District contest pits two opponents against each other who have both run unopposed in the primary, and must now fight it out in the general election Nov. 4

Running for the House seat, which represents Plymouth and Plymouth Township and part of Canton, will be incumbent Republican Gerald Law against Democrat Kathy Reilly.

Law has four years of legislative experience behind him in Lansing, while Reilly will be entering the race as a newcomer to politics.

GERALD LAW

public schooling," Reilly said.

Law said that one of the main points of his term in office, which he believes will be the main topic of the next term - will be property taxes.

"This will be the No. 1 issue. The Plymouth area is a popular area with many people moving here, and many people are going to be very unhappy about property taxes," Law said in a phone interview.

Law agreed that public education is one place that suffers because of the property tax crunch, and that a time will come soon when the state will have to put more money into the education fund.

An issue that Reilly criticized Law for, was his handling of the current prison situation in north Plymouth Township and into Northville.

"I don't think that Mr. Law fought hard enough to keep the prisons out, we have three prisons in our district now and they are taking away from a potential tax base," Reilly said.

Law, however, points to his work with the prison situation as one of his major accomplishments in his first term.

"Prisons are still an ongoing problem in our area, but I did write legislation that prohibits the building of additional prisons in our communities," Law said. "Because of that legislation we are the only community in the state that has a moratorium on size, numbers and security on prisons."

The candidates also disagreed on a recent bill that went through the house dealing with caps on court awards for "pain and suffering," which would have put a $250,000 limit on awards.

Law said that he voted "yes" for that bill, but he called it a very "soft cap" because of many exceptions that were put into the bill that weakened its intent. He said he had mixed feeling on the issue, saying that a "tort reform" might do more good in the long run.

Reilly, however, said that she probably would have voted "no" for that bill because she did not believe the amount of the award was appropriate.

"I think we need a cap, but I'm not sure how much money it would take. I would want to know what it would take a person to live on. The quality of life should not go down, but some kind of a cap would certainly be appropriate," she said.

The candidates voting records since registering in Plymouth Township are: Law has voted 19 times, while Reilly is recorded as voting 5 times.

Reilly, who spoke at The Crier candidate forum which Law chose not to attend, said one of her main concerns revolves around the education issue.

"We tend to push kids through the system, I think there should be legislation that would require testing for kids to get past each grade. I would also like to see more state financing for

Mack, Press shoot for 11th District seat

BY DAN NESS

Incumbent 11th District (which includes Canton) County Commissioner Milton Mack is facing Republican challenger Scott Press in the Nov. 4 election.

In the campaign, Mack points to his record as reason to be re-elected, while Press says it's time to get a Republican into the 11th District commissioner's seat.

Mack says he has gone to bat for 11th District residents in his efforts to eliminate the office of road commissioner, which was incorporated into the office of public services, and his most recent fight to eliminate the office of the drain commissioner.

Press, on the other hand, says Mack, as a Democrat, has contributed to the county's financial situation, and says "we've got too many career politicians sitting down in Wayne County. We need a bigger bi-partisan role in the commission. They need more Republicans."

The two differed in responses to questions about the proposed North Huron Valley/Rouge Valley sewer project (Son of Supersewer). Press said that large communities "like Canton" would have to "take the lead" in working for a sewer system, because smaller communities could not afford it.

Mack said the sewer project "would go forward, with or without Canton," but added, "Canton Township has already paid too much money (for the project). That's an acknowledged fact."

The Canton Board of Trustees voted unanimously to not participate in the Son of Supersewer project, saying that Canton would have to pay too much of the total cost, compared to other communities.

Mack said both the federal government and the state's DNR had not treated western Wayne County fairly in the sewer project to date. "Frankly, I have my doubts whether the DNR really has its heart in this project," Mack said. Mack said he would work with the state to retrieve 20 per cent of the sewer project's cost, which was lost when the federal government reduced funding from 75 to 55 per cent.

Press said one way to trim the county's budget was to turn over all county parks to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority. Press said this move would save the county $2.5 million annually. Press also said he would cut commissioner's pay by $3-5,000, and the county executive's pay by $10,000 if elected.

"This county is not being managed as well as Oakland and Macomb counties," Press said.

Mack said the county's financial situation was the result of the county executive's work, who sets the budget, and not the county commission. He said the commission had not ratified a budget for a higher amount than County Executive William Lucas had set, since his taking office.

Mack also said the county could save money by eliminating the office of the drain commissioner, and incorporate it into other departments. A better management system for the county would also save money, he said. "I think the management of the county's affairs and finances is a disgrace," Mack said. Mack also said that turning county parks over to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority would not work, since the HCMA would not want to take over parks, such as Hines Park, that do not make money.

Mack pointed out that he had voted against a proposed pay increase for county-wide elected officials.

The two candidates disagreed on the issue of public improvements to western Wayne County. Press said the office of public services had done an "adequate job" in the out-county communities. "We don't need to spend any more money in western Wayne County, the services are adequate," Press said.

Mack said, despite some progress, "there's a lot more that needs to be done out here." Mack said he is working to get the Act 51 (state gas tax money, which funds road work) formula for funding changed, so that counties would pick up a larger share than they are receiving now.

In closing, Press said the county commission was in need of a change. "The county commission just doesn't care about the suburbs," he said. "He's (Mack) been in office for four years, and things aren't getting done in Wayne County."

Mack said "great strides" had been made in county government, but more needed to be done. He stressed that his effort to eliminate the office of the drain commissioner was a priority. Mack said he would continue to make county government less intimidating to county residents. "In general, my goal has been to complete the reform of county government."

Mack has voted in every election since he registered in the City of Wayne in 1970. Press, from Wayne, has voted in 14 of 18 elections since 1979.

Robbers strike on Beck Road

A Plymouth man was robbed early Thursday morning by a man who said he had a gun, on Beck Road in Canton.

According to Canton police reports, Robert Berrong, 25, of Plymouth, was riding in a car with people he had hitched a ride from after he and a friend had gotten their vehicle stuck in a swamp near Michigan Avenue.

After splitting up with his friend, Berrong got into a car with a man and woman, who drove between Hanford and Warren on Beck Road. The driver then got out of the car, pulled Berrong from the back seat out of the car, and pushed him against the back of the car telling Berrong to hand over all of his money or he would be shot, according to police.

Mocko Jumbie is the tall character on stilts who is able to see the evil spirits approach an African village and chase them away with his dance.

Mocko Jumbie is alive today in several African countries and one of the few places in the Caribbean -- the U.S. Virgin Islands where over the years the dance has evolved and become part of festivals and Carnivals.

Geake, Law missing links to informed electorate

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial is NOT an endorsement -- either for or against -- any of the candidates mentioned. This editorial is a comment on only one aspect of a candidacy. Read these pages in next week's Crier for endorsements in all races in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

Why would candidates who know what they are talking about refuse to meet with their opponents face-to-face during an election campaign?

That's what we'd like to know.

In the last two weeks, The Crier held several candidate meetings, with the opponents meeting each other with our editorial staff to discuss the issues. Five candidates refused to attend in this format for a variety of reasons.

Gerald Law did not want to show because it would not be to his benefit, he said. Robert Geake did not want to show because this paper treated him poorly in past endorsements of candidates, he said. Bob Murphy did not show because he did not have time to discuss the issues with his opponent. Theodore Jacques and Glen Kassel did not show because they said they couldn't debate incumbent office holders who had more information than they did.

Who do they think they're kidding? None of these lame excuses hold water, and intelligent readers should be able to see right through these smokescreens.

Not only are these excuses an insult to the voter's intelligence -- they also say something about the candidate who fumbled for them in refusing to meet opponents in a newspaper forum.

Other candidates -- who may also disagree with the face-to-face format, by the way -- were confident enough in what they represent to show up and speak on the issues. The fact that the people who did show up represented a variety of candidates only makes the no-shows' excuses look more petty.

Incumbents who lack the backbone to fairly discuss the issues -- like Geake and Law -- look like spoiled fat cats who feel the voters are owed nothing for putting them on the Lansing largesse.

The Susan Heintz--John Kopka debate for the 10th District Wayne County Commission race was nothing short of enlightening. It was perfect example of what a face-to-face discussion can show about the respective candidates.

In the 11th District County Commission race, you have a young Republican challenger running against a more experienced incumbent. But, Scott Press chose to discuss the issues with us and with County Commissioner Milton Mack. The Republicans can be proud that their candidate, although a challenger, had the confidence and integrity to face an incumbent and tell us why he differed on issues.

Mack, on the other hand, could have skipped the meeting (ala Geake and Law), comforted by the blanket of incumbency and not respond to challenger's charges. But, he didn't. He showed up, and Democrats can be proud that Mack is confident enough to not feel threatened by meeting with a challenger.

Good for Mack and Press. No-show incumbents and challengers could take a lesson from their actions.

When it comes right down to it, a candidate for public office should not shy away from meeting the press, the public, or their opponent for whatever reason they can come up with. By not showing up, the candidates are only begging the question -- what are they hiding?

In most cases (hopefully), nothing. But, they weren't here to confirm that. And, that's too bad for them, and for voters who want to be as informed as possible on election day.

THE COMMUNITY CRIER

Missing in action were two incumbent Republican state legislators -- that's Rep. Gerry Law's empty seat at left and Sen. Bob Geake's vacant position in the right photo. Since the two refused to debate their opponents face to face, Kathy Reilly and Tom Healy had an easy time in the debates.

Proverbs: 'Fools despise wisdom and instruction'

EDITOR:

Please publish this letter in response to your article of Oct. 15 regarding Diane Daskalakis, and also to John Hoben and David Artley of The Plymouth-Canton School Board to the banning of the movie "The Breakfast Club."

First of all, maybe Diane should have sat in on the psychology class that was going to show the movie — that is, before she saw fit to have it stopped. She would have found a very realistic movie about kids. She would have also found out that while the kids learned about themselves — they also found out that a lot of what made them the way they are were adults, of which parents are included. Adults had tried to make them into something they weren't, by forcing ideals and images on them. Ideals like, "I don't think you should see this movie."

Diane, who are you to tell someone what they can or cannot see or read based on your opinions? I have nothing against your opinions on what you find offensive — until you try and make me abide by them.

Please, by all means, voice your opinion — but don't force it.

Mr. Hoben and Mr. Artley are just as bad by saying "I viewed it and found it offensive." Though not quoted as such, this statement really says, "I didn't like it, therefore, neither should you, so you can't see it."

As educators, Mr. Hoben and Mr. Artley are supposed to be making sure our school curriculum teaches students to think and reason based on what they see, read and hear. By making statements such as the one quoted in The Crier, you are merely showing them how to follow blindly.

Next, Diane plans to try to ban some books, and based on past actions, may get support from Mr. Hoben and Mr. Artley. Why can't you people see where you might be taking something like this?

I'm sure I'd have no problem in reaching Mr. Hoben and Mr. Artley, but getting Diane is another matter. I don't have a phone number or address. I want to get in touch with her quickly because I need to know if she'll let me see "Children of a Lesser God." But, like the main character in the movie, she probably wouldn't hear me and then wouldn't listen if she could. beside that, the title might be too offensive anyway.

EDITOR:

First there was "Gundella" then "The Breakfast Club," now Walt Disney's "Sword and the Sorcerer" and the book, Rules for Radicals. When will Diane Daskalakis feel that "The Wizard of Oz" is objectionable?

This woman is selling our children and all of us short, she is telling us that we cannot guide our own children. And what about our children? Just because they explore and are exposed to new concepts and ways of life does not mean they will embrace that which is new and forget all that we as parents have taught, have lived, have believed.

I have upheld Diane Daskalakis' right to practice what she believes, why can't she let me practice what I believe.

When controversial material is being used in the classroom, why not have a note sent home stating what aspect the unit is dealing with and if the parents feel they do not want their child participating in the class, let them be the ones to notify the school and the teacher. In this manner, the parents are the ones still responsible for their children's religious, moral, social and educational upbringing.

This country was settled by people escaping religious persecution — escaping because they could not practice what they believed. Diane Daskalakis is a serious threat to freedom. Freedom to read, to explore, to view what you want. This woman wants all of us to read, explore and view only what she feels is appropriate.

Let's not go back to the days of witch burning and of censorship. Let's stop Diane Daskalakis NOW.

EDITOR:

Not surprisingly, in a controversy like the one now brewing around the banning of movies and other materials at Centennial Educational Park, one will find more than one side to the issue. I hope to show yet another perspective.

I trust your readers will not simplify this issue into a polarized view of "secular humanist" teachers against "born again" Christians, while central administrators try to do a careful, political dance between the two, issuing directives to the only side they can direct. There are also others caught in the middle of this conflict.

I am a new teacher at the park; I am also a new Christian. Because I have insight into (and sympathies with) the attitudes of people on both sides of the argument, I have begun to feel compelled to offer my position publicly in hopes of speaking for others who find themselves in a similar situation.

When I became a Christian, many elements of my life were finally resolved and ordered. But, about many other elements, I suddenly discovered I was grossly ignorant. Questions needed answering, not only about what I was experiencing, but how I should live and what I should stand for. I am finding the answers to these questions and many more in a book which, ironically, has itself been banned for many reasons, in many cultures, at many different times in history. The Bible has survived dozens of attempts to eradicate its unconventional teachings, and not always because only Christians defended it. Often, it was defended by the intelligensia, the educated people of the time, the teachers, as it were, who knew that this beautiful book was the one most likely to be read by a wide segment of society and thus encourage thinking, literacy and inquiry.

Now, oddly, this book, once used exclusively as the foundation of a public education system, has become the source some people try to justify banning other pieces of literature and art forms. It is largely because of this and that, like any good evangelist, I want to turn to it, to justify a more tolerant (and more Jesus-like) attitude toward those materials which exhibit thinking and values different from, or even alien to, our own.

The Book of Proverbs is one of the most insightful and poetic in the Old Testament. It still offers modern society sound counsel about the nature of wisdom, knowledge and instruction. One needs look no further than Chapter 1, verse 5 to find that, "A wise man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels."; or verse 7 which indicates, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge, but fools despise wisdom and instruction."; and later, verses 20 through 22 say "Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets; she crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates; in the city she uttereth her words, saying, How long, the simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and all the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge. At this point I leave it to your readers to decide on which side of this issue God finds Himself.

The question is not whether God approves of the showing of any particular movie in the classroom. At issue is the principle of academic freedom (tempered within the framework of the rights of the students, their parents and their teachers.) If it hadn't have been for educated people insisting on academic freedom, the Bible itself might not have survived to us in its present form.

The principle of academic freedom is much larger than any of the movies to which it is applied. It is a principle which Christians, parents, teachers, administrators and students must preserve, even at great cost. It is a principle which deserves our working in tandem because it is the fundamental element of value and integrity in a free, public education system.

EDITOR:

As a 1983 Canton High School graduate, I read about the banning of "The Breakfast Club" with great interest.

It is obvious that the petition signers 1. Didn't understand a movie that is easy to understand or 2. Didn't see the movie. I have seen the movie three times, and it does an outstanding job of addressing the point of high school cliques. It makes the high school student more aware of the fact that there are cliques, and how it feels to be on the outside. I've been in college for over three years and, looking back, it's easy to understand how cliques work. For a high school student, it may, or may not, be as easy.

Yes, there was marijuana used in the movie. Yes, there is swearing. As stated earlier, I think the movie is excellent. I do not use marijuana and I rarely swear (never at anyone else). If the person watching the film has half a brain, this movie won't inspire them to smoke pot or swear.

"The Breakfast Club" is probably the best movie out there that openly, honestly and realistically deals with high school cliques. It was an outstanding pick by the CEP psychology teachers. Those who want to ban the movie are obviously paranoid.

Paranoia is much more dangerous than a movie where marijuana is smoked.

Film banning violated school policy

EDITOR:

This letter is in response to the recent banning of the film "The Breakfast Club" from the Plymouth-Canton high schools.

The instructor followed established School Board procedures by presenting a request to show the film in his class to the Board for its approval. His request was approved. The instructor again followed proper procedures by requiring written parental consent for a student to view the film. Students whose parents did not want their son/daughter to see the film were given an alternative assignment.

If the Board had concerns about the film, why did they approve its showing? Dr. Hoben said it is a coincidence his ban coincided with the delivery to the Board of a petition by Diane Daskalakis, Plymouth-Canton's self-appointed censor. One has to wonder.

Dr. Hoben's ban by an "administrative decision" does not follow School Board procedures for dealing with such issues. Please follow your own rules Dr. Hoben! By doing so perhaps all voices will have the opportunity to be heard.

Go CEP band!

In case you haven't noticed, Plymouth-Canton residents, we have a dynasty in the making right in our backyards.

The CEP Marching Band will defend its state championship Saturday at the CEP football field. Bets are that this group will win again. Certainly, the people involved with the band are confident.

And why shouldn't they be?

This is a group who has won the last two championship competitions, both held at CEP. This is a group who has come out on top of every competition they have played in this season. The President of the United States has been an audience to the same band that Plymouth-Canton residents can see at halftime at CEP football games.

Hey - we've got quite a team here!

And we're not the only ones who know it. One week from this Saturday, the band will travel to Kalamazoo to play in the "Cavalcade of Bands" at Western Michigan University. The competition is good, featuring 12 bands from Michigan, Illinois and Indiana.

The Cavalcade is sponsored in part by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia professional music fraternity at Western. A member of that host frat -- Bruce Ruttenberg -- is from Plymouth. Obviously, he knows something about the collective mentality of the CEP Marching Band.

"My understanding is that they plan to use our contest as a warm-up to Marching Bands of America Grand Nationals in Indianapolis the following weekend," Ruttenberg wrote, in a note to the local press. Eleven other bands will be happy to win at Kalamazoo, and this guy "understands" that the CEP'ers will be merely warming up their mouthpieces and oiling their valves at Kalamazoo before really playing the next weekend in Indy.

Yeah, they've got a reputation.

You can bet the band will be fired up for this weekend's competition on the home field. Even more fired up will be the band's loyal supporters. The band fest should draw a sizeable crowd once again.

Having said that, I think it would be great if the hometown folks got even one more chance to see the band marching on its own territory. And I think the time to do it would be during the Canton Country Festival in June.

Even as the CEP'ers are winning here (my prediction) next weekend, the Country Fest Board of Directors will be looking for people to get excited about a parade in conjunction with the Fest. Last year it was cancelled, because of lack of volunteers and money. Next June, they hope to bring it back, and they deserve everyone's support.

I think a great way to resurrect the parade (with flourish) would be for the CEP Marching Band to host an invitational band festival for the parade. Make the parade a marching band competition, and hopefully, the enthusiasm of the band-people would boost the chances of holding a 1987 Country Fest parade.

As it stands, the chances of a parade for the '87 Country Fest depends on how many Cantonites there are out there who are willing to volunteer their time organizing the parade. As it stands, the CEP Marching Band is a reigning champion in our midst, and a popular attraction to boot.

Hopefully, the details (of which there are many) can be worked out, and the volunteer support will come forward in order for a parade to become a reality. If it does, I'd like to see the local championship team host its own invitational along with it.

We'll see you Saturday.

Kids: Don't look at this picture!

Will the self-appointed censors in Plymouth-Canton Schools try to ban this classic tale of good and evil next? That's a witch trying to give drugs to Snow White(right).

Fly your model planes away from our homes

EDITOR:

I read with interest your recent article on the model airplane show that was held in Canton at a location near Lilley and Van Born roads.

I really could relate to parts of the article because I have been an unwilling and unhappy spectator of a "model airplane show" held in the vicinity of my home for the past several years. This "show," put on by the members of an airplane club who fly in my neighborhood, starts early in April and continues to the middle of October.

Your article spoke of "the high-pitch" sound of the engines filling the air as the planes took off and landed."

Boy, I know what your reporter is talking about! That "high pitch sound" has filled my yard and my home for the past three years!

Flying goes on nearly every Saturday and Sunday, several evenings a week, and sometimes during weekdays as well. Unlike the sound of a commercial airplane that flies over and the sound is gone in two or three minutes, the sound of these radio-controlled airplanes as they go around and around is a continuous, monotonous roar until the pilot decides to land the plane.

Members of the airplane club who do not live in the neighborhood drive out and fly all afternoon and evening, and then when it is almost dark, load up their planes in their vans, cars and pickups and drive back to their homes where it has probably been nice and quiet all day.

The flying of radio-controlled airplanes is probably a fine hobby and there are locations in Canton suitable for this activity -- the Lilley Road-Van Born site is one of these. This site, bounded on the north by a railroad track, on the east by a factory and a waste disposal company, on the south by a woods and a junk yard and no private homes to the west is an ideal location of such flying.

Radio-controlled model airplanes should not be permitted to fly in residential areas of Canton.

Bernie packs his old kit bag

After 50 years in town longtime owner retires

BY T.M. SMITH

Back on a bright day in September, when Bernie Morrison pulled his car onto the road and headed for his home in Farmington Hills -- a lump caught in his throat.

The day seemed a little gloomy then, because Morrison knew he was making his final trip out of Plymouth as a business man.

Morrison, who has owned and managed Famous Men's Wear on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth since the 1950s, retired last month.

He sold the store to Fred Hill, and although Morrison says he plans to return to Plymouth as often as possible -- he has retired from the clothing business.

"That day I left I had the biggest lump in my throat. I've moved on a lot in my life, but that was the only time in my life I felt like I was leaving a part of my life behind," Morrison said.

Morrison said the reason for the sentimental feelings has to do with the people of Plymouth.

"When I was in Plymouth, I always felt as if I was among friends. It didn't matter who it was, or if they did business with me or not, everyone was friendly," he said.

Morrison came to Plymouth in the 1950s, and began with a smaller store across the street from his present location.

And although he said business was good in that store, things started to pick up when he moved into the newer, larger store. But getting that store was not easy.

"The time of bidding on the new store and waiting for it to come through was the hardest part of all my years. I knew if I got the newer store I could make it go, but the waiting was the hardest part," he said.

Once he got that store, Morrison said everything just seemed to fall into place.

And although he said he could spin hours of stories of the highlights of his years in Plymouth, one of his memories is spurred by a personal tragedy in his life.

He said the best feeling of goodwill he got in Plymouth was after his wife died five years ago, and all the love he felt in town.

"That day I left I had the biggest lump in my throat ... I felt like I was leaving a part of my life behind."

--Bernie Morrison

"Plymouth was my refuge when my wife died. It was my lifesaver, people reached out and cared and it was really nice to see the love and support from all my friends," he said.

But Morrison can also be credited for bringing many other positive things to the city.

He was the planner and organizer for the first sidewalk and midnight madness sales, and although they are a hit today -- everything didn't always seem so rosey when it started.

"I planned it and hyped it up and got everybody involved, but there was a lot of doubts. The night it was supposed to happen it was pouring cats and dogs, and I was sure I was going to get run out of town on a broom stick.

"But when we showed up at the stores there were people huddling around waiting to get in," he said.

Even with all of these fond memories, Morrison is enjoying his time off.

"This is the first time since I been a kid that I haven't had get up and go, it is a nice feeling to relax. I get to play with my grandkids, and travel and just smell some roses."

WINNER OF THE WEEK

BRITCHER—RIVERS

What would you do if you found two brand new bicycles on some property near your house?

Brandon Rivers, 9, and Matthew Britcher, 10, found two brand new bikes, and they turned them in to the Canton police department, which found the rightful owner.

"I saw some colors in the creek," said Britcher, as he described how they found the bikes. "We hid them so no one would take them," said Rivers. The boys then went home and told Bob Rivers, Brandon's father.

It turned out that the bikes were stolen from a man who had just bought them for his kids, and they were returned on his birthday.

Brandon and Matthew are our Winners of the Week for being upright citizens and making the owners of the bikes very happy.

tell it to Phyllis

Telling a newspaper person not to write about something is like telling a three year old not to touch a piece of candy that is within grabbing distance.

Knowing the "I'll get you" threat is probably going to become a reality, you should weigh the consequence. How bad can the punishment be? At the age of three I discovered the candy was worth the risk of getting my hand slapped, and my stubborn determination hasn't been changed.

It all started last Thursday evening when my neighbor (who had managed to trip and break a bone in her foot) called for a ride home from the emergency room. Since her car was there and she couldn't drive it home, my son drove me over to Oakwood-Canton Center. (We've used Oakwood for several friends, family and co-workers, since it opened five years ago last week. I was appointed to its citizens' Advisory Board last spring.)

As I was about to go in the door, I noticed someone having trouble getting out of a car. I did what everyone else would do in that situation. I went over and asked if I could help him.

"Oh no, what are you doing here?" was the reply I received. I took a second look before I realized I knew the person who was obviously in a bit of pain. Being an independent individual, he was determined that he didn't need any help. I simply walked in with him -- I really didn't think he was going to make it by himself. It's amazing what stubbornness can do.

I realize this well-known person was uncomfortable in more ways than one. His foot had to be killing him, and I could tell he was embarrassed as he introduced me to his son (the chauffeur).

As I was getting ready to wheel my neighbor out to the car in a wheel chair, our friend glanced over and said something like, "I'm not leaving here in one of those things."

After getting my neighbor in the car, I returned the wheel chair to the emergency room. When what to my wondering eyes should appear, but our friend -- the bank president -- in a wheel chair. As the friendly employees at Oakwood Hospital in Canton can attest, I tried to suppress the gales of laughter.

I heard him exclaim as I dashed out the door, "If I read one word about this in the paper, I'll get you for it."

Sorry Ken, I just couldn't resist. I hope you're feeling better, especially by the time you read this.

This is how Parker Brothers Monopoly Game portrayed the local bank president (named Ken) as he insisted, "Don't you dare print this."

Lisa Marie Forthofer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Forthofer of Normandy Court East in Plymouth, is a freshman at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn. She is a 1986 graduate of Canton High School.

Mark Williams entered the U.S. Air Force on Oct. 2. A 1986 graduate of Salem High School, he is the son of Rita Williams of Northwind Drive in Canton.

Christopher Scott of Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth received a M.S. Degree in Geology from Northern Illinois University.

Maria Crossley of Plymouth won first place in the Illinois Sociological Association's Student Paper Competition. The title of her paper is "The Impact of Divorce on Adolescents' Self Esteem".

getting down to business

A family of professional copy cats

BY KEN VOYLES

Technological wonders seem to overshadow the human element at Engineering Reproduction Center in Plymouth Township.

The two-year-old family business operated by Jim Lennon (and children John and Julie) is a marvel of machinery and what can be done to improve man's ability to accurately and easily reproduce drawings, blueprints, sketches, maps, microfilm and even art prints.

Lennon, 59, of Plymouth Township, formed his business after 35 years with Kodak. He retired from Kodak and decided there was a definite need in the community for a reproduction center that goes beyond the quick print outfits and caters to professionals.

"I just felt with my experience in the field," Lennon said, "that this might be a good way to start up my own business."

"We get people from all over," he added. "They've come from as far as Columbus, OH. But mostly they come from around here and other Western Wayne communities."

The center can handle just about any job and with the only electrostatic machine of its kind in the area the Lennons reap a major advantage.

The $100,000 Japanese-made wonder can enlarge or reduce just about any kind of material, including photographs, but mostly it's used to reproduce black-line drawings from architects or engineers.

"That's a real hunk of equipment," Lennon said of his Shacoh Company reproducer. The business, housed in a small office along Ann Arbor Road, also includes a high speed blueprint machine (with a $450, 7,000-watt bulb) and a smaller, slower blueprinter.

Costs are relative cheap for the consumer and the best reproduction materials are used such as vellum, mylar and bond.

"Our business is growing all the time. It's mostly been by word of mouth," said Lennon, who employs his son John and daughter Julie in the office. Julie Lennon is in fact the master technician on the electrostatic copier and John runs the high speed blueprint machine.

The company does a lot of work for the governments of Plymouth and Canton Townships directly and some indirect work for the city of Plymouth, Ford, Chrysler and even General Motors.

"We'll probably expand in about a year," Lennon said. "We'll be bigger and better. We want to get into high speed copying and maybe some photography."

When expansion comes it will be to a bigger office somewhere in the Plymouth-Canton Community.

Working on blueprints all day may sound boring, but according to Lennon his outfit gets a lot of unusual requests, such as scaled up reproductions of stain glass window designs, festival banners, poster size crossword puzzles and even reprints of newspaper articles.

"It's going pretty good," Lennon said. "We had lived in Plymouth for seven years and this was our choice when I retired. We think its one of the best communities we've lived in and we've lived all over the country."

Lennon's hot little business does a lot of work for local architects and individual planning consultants besides the bigger firms and the local government units.

A recently hired salesperson will help expand the business even further.

There is only one other reproduction outfit of its kind in the area and that's in Livonia.

"We're getting ready to make an assault on Livonia," Lennon said. "We started this from scratch and we're working ourselves up. We've chipped away at the competition."

As members of the International Reprographic Association, the Lennons believe in strict confidentiality for all business transactions.

"That's more important than it might seem," he said. "The international insists on careful handling of all materials and total confidentiality."

And the reproduction process is so fascinating that some people drop by just to see how it works.

seniors and juniors in the well-mannered crowd including her friends Katie Koch, Ben McMurray and Alissa Harless. Koch, a Canton junior, and McMurray and Harless, Salem seniors, were also instrumental in making the meeting a reality.

A representative from the Metro Detroit office of the American Civil Liberties Union, David Wineman, showed up to express the ACLU's support and help the students draft a counter-petition.

"This is a classic First Amendment case," Wineman told the students. "We're very concerned about what is happening and that a vocal minority of individuals in the community can actually take control of the curriculum by petitioning the school board.

"They have a right to petition the board but the board has an obligation under the law to protect the First Amendment rights of students to receive information.

"I came out here today from the ACLU to support you students who are insisting that the board support your constitutional rights," he continued. "Parents have a right to opt out, that is not allow their kids to see the movie, but another individual cannot decide for them."

Wineman told the students they should gather petition signatures from registered voters in the community and present them, and their case, to the school board at its next regular meeting on Monday, Oct. 27.

"They have an obligation to rectify the mistake that has been made," he said. "If the board does not respond we are prepared to support this effort in court."

Wineman, a staff member at the ACLU, also explained that his organization would still have to decide whether or not to take the case if the board fails to alter its decision.

"They didn't follow the procedure they set up," Schlagheck said. "We're not questioning the policy or Diane Daskalakis, but the fact that they didn't follow what they had set up."

Procedure 3706.4 declares that a review committee must be set up on a case by case basis following a written complaint from residents challenging something done in the classroom setting.

That committee -- to include an administrator, teacher, librarian and two parents -- studies the objection and sends its recommendation back to the board.

In the case of "The Breakfast Club"

'Sword' banned?

A review committee is being formed this week to look into another complaint, this time over the showing of the film "The Sword and the Sorcerer" to East Middle School students.

According to Richard Egli, community relations administrator, the committee will be formed this week to evaluate the movie.

The complaint was presented to the schools last week on a regulation form that includes the specific objections to the classroom showing of "Sword."

Egli said the committee is being formed in this case, and was not for the Superintendent John M. Hoben abandoned the procedure and made an executive decision instead.

"The superintendent simply preempted that procedure," said Community Relations Director Richard Egli. "As chief executive officer he has that prerogative. He can do that -- step in and make a decision."

Egli said he was on the executive cabinet that looked into the complaint and agreed with Hoben's decision to ban the movie without further review by the committee.

He has since received "three of four" calls expressing concern about the decision.

"There's a question of due process here as well as First Amendment rights," Wineman explained.

"We'd like to see the decision revoked and go before the committee as it should have in the first place," said Strauss. "We'd like to see them say 'we're wrong.'"

The petition, which went out this week, says in part, "We're opposed to the abandonment of the procedure for reviewing controversial material. We petition the board to rectify the error of the superintendent and instruct him to assemble the proper committee to evaluate the movie 'The Breakfast Club.'"

Schlagheck, sports editor of the CEP Perspective newspaper, said she hopes the students can raise at least 700 signatures, the number Daskalakis obtained to protest the film's showing in a psychology class at CEP.

"They didn't use the procedure because there were objections to content," Wineman said. "They yielded to community pressure."

Schlagheck said she is prepared to be a plaintiff in a case against the board if going to court becomes necessary.

Although it was the students who gathered to plan a counter-protest, there was underlying support last week from teachers and parents as well.

Rocco Schettini, a Canton Township resident with a 16-year-old son at CEP, said, "I don't understand where she (Daskalakis) gets off forcing her views on everyone."

"Censorship is not a dirty word," he continued. "It's an evil word."

Schettini said he respects Daskalakis' beliefs but wonders why she wants to ban something she has no direct interest in. "Personally I think she's out for publicity," he said. "And I'm really upset with Mr. Hoben."

Schettini said he saw the film with his son Marc and that it had a "good impact on me."

film "The Breakfast Club," because there is less reason to believe the objection is valid.

"This isn't as clear cut as 'The Breakfast Club,'" he said.

The complaint was filed by Diane Daskalakis. She charges the film is full of "devil worship."

In a letter to parents she writes, "...never have we seen such an anti-Christian and pro-Satan statement aimed so directly at our children."

Daskalakis says the R-rated movie is not the animated Walt Disney version.

MONTEVIDEO—BOLOS AND BEACHES

You're off to Uruguay, the smallest country in South America. The capital, Montevideo, is only 40 minutes by air from Buenos Aires, and there is a flight virtually every hour. When you arrive in Montevideo, take in the city sights from airport to hotel. Go as fast as you can to the beach — where the rest of the people already are. The most popular beach for tourists is Playa Pocitos, a short ride by taxi or bus. A less crowded beach, Playa Carrasco, is twelve miles farther down the road.

The shops have everything in leather. The buys in suede and monato (unborn calfskin) are distinctive. Woolen goods are also very good. As far as gems are concerned, however, wait and buy them in Brazil.

The gaucho and all his tourist trappings fill the stores of Montevideo: silver cups, sheathed knives, bolos, bombachas (the billowy trousers), belts, and ponchos.

Excellent ranch tours take you right to the paddocks to watch the gaucho work the cattle and sheep. Visit Montevideo and see how the other half lives.

PCA golfers surprise Class D rivals at finals

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Plymouth Cristian Academy golf team took fifth place in the Class D State Finals over the weekend.

"The kids played great, they really handled themselves well," said head coach Pat Coyne.

PCA finished third in its regional which qualified them for the state finals. Pat McCarthy was the low scorer for PCA, as he shot an 80, this made it possible for McCarthy to be a medalist. Mike Coyne finished second for PCA with a 90, followed by Jeff Voss with a 93.

The state finals were held in Byron MI., on a course head coach Coyne called "very demanding." PCA finished fifth out of the nine teams, in the finals.

McCarthy shot an 86 which placed him sixth overall in the state meet. Jeff Voss followed closely behind McCarthy with an 87, which was Voss's low score of the year.

PCA, who just started its golf team last year, has come a long way in a short time. Last year the team finished up the season with a 1-8 record.

But then came the dramatic turn around. PCA finished this year with a record of 6-6. But all six of their losses were to Class A schools, while they went unbeaten against Class C and D schools.

"It was a great year, and if everything goes the way it should, we should contend for the title once again," said Coyne.

Girls cage clash brings Salem-Canton rivalry

BY JANET ARMSTRONG

A Salem versus Canton game (in any sport) is different from any other game played during the season and especially so in girls basketball.

"It's always different when we play each other, because of everyone being friends and rivals at the same time. But that makes the game more tense and exciting," said Keri McBride, a varsity starter for Salem.

Canton knew coming into the game it would be more than just another tough game.

"A lot of it is mental, we can't think of them as unbeatable, we have to just step out and play our game," said Cheif's co-captain Karen Boluch.

Canton controlled the ball through much of the game, which slowed Salem's offense down.

"Canton did a great job controlling the tempo of the game," said Salem coach Fred Thomann, but apparently it wasn't enough as the Rocks went on to win the contest 43-35.

The victory for Salem was due in part to 21 points from Dena Head. Jessica Handley also had an impressive night with 14 points for the Rocks.

"Our players played really well," said Thomann. "I thought part of the reason we won was the fact that we had some easy scores off defense, and off the fast break."

But the momentum was with Salem as they out-scored Canton in all but the third quarter. The Rocks never lost the lead, putting it away late in the fourth quarter with the help of two easy lay-ups by Jill Estey in the final three minutes.

Despite never catching Salem, Canton didn't give up and kept it close until the fourth quarter.

"We were really patient and we took care of the ball," said Canton's coach Rob Neu. "Our goal going into the game was to concentrate and execute and make fewer mistakes.

"We did that and we improved," he added.

Canton's Jennifer Gansler and Heather Miller were in foul trouble most of the night which put a tamper on Canton's defense. Both ended the game with four fouls. Miller and Gansler alternated the defensive duty of guarding Head.

But the Chiefs felt confident about how they played against the Rocks.

"I think we played our best game this season and it gives us the confidence to challenge for the division title," said co-captain Gansler. "We proved to ourselves that we are a good team and we have the ability to play against the best."

Wallman looks to lead Kalamazoo

Sarah Wallman, a junior at Kalamazoo College, will help lead the school's women's soccer team in their bid for a berth in the NCAA Division II tournament.

Wallman is a graduate of Salem High. Her family still lives in Canton Township.

The women's team at Kalamazoo College finished 9-4-1 last season. This year's NCAA Division II tournament is the first ever of its kind in women's soccer.

Little appreciated heroes abound on CEP teams

BY JANET ARMSTRONG

There are many unsung heroes who attend and play varsity sports at the high school level and who don't receive the kind of recognition they deserve.

Ferko, a senior, has been a member of the Canton girls basketball team for four years, three of those seasons with the varsity team.

During her sophomore year she rotated from the junior varsity squad to the varsity team, but by the end of the season she had earned her varsity letter.

In her junior year, Ferko was overshadowed by such basketball talents as Beth Frigge, Diana Knickerbocker, and Laura Darby. Although she started, she was never noted to be a playmaker, and still isn't.

"She's Miss Consistency," said senior teammate Jennifer Gansler.

Ferko isn't one to let a lack of playing time get her down. She makes every practice session at Phase III and is loath to miss a game.

"I love basketball," said Ferko.

Another teammate, Karen Boluch, added, "We always know Vicky will go out and do her best. We can always count on her."

Ferko is a talented individual but not just in the world of basketball she also carries a 3.6 grade point average at Canton and would like to attend Michigan State University.

"I would like to play at the college level but if I do it would have to be at a small college," said Ferko.

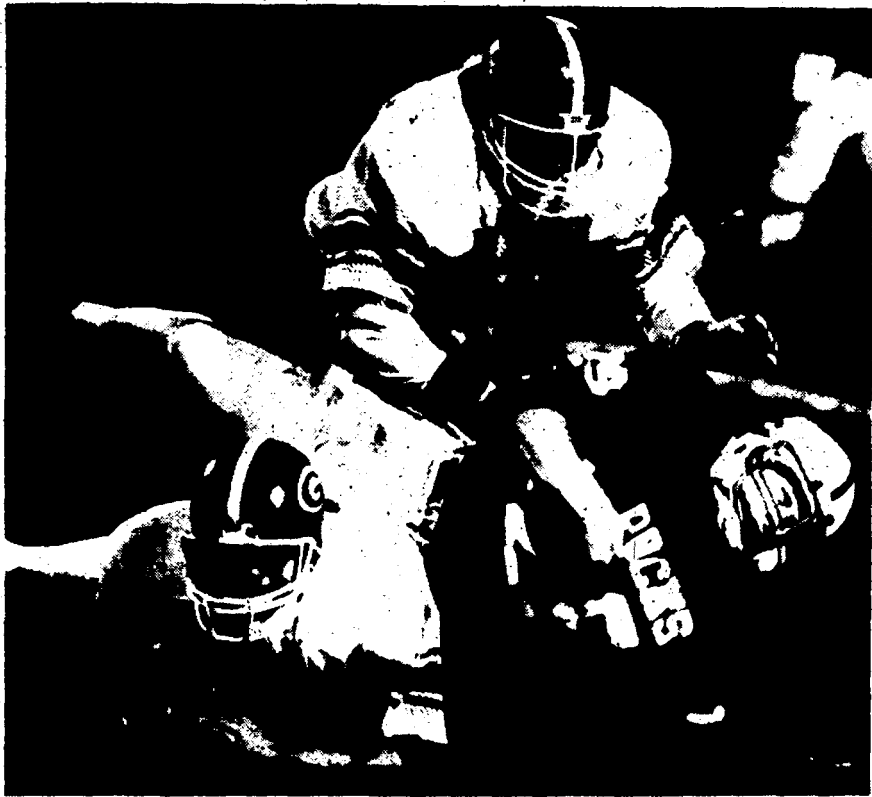

Basketball isn't Ferko's only sport. In her sophomore year she made the varsity girls volleyball team, but decided to not try out her junior year. She said she plans to try out for the team again this year.

But basketball is still a high priority for Ferko, and she always gives it her best shot.

"She comes in everyday and works her hardest," said Canton coach Rob Neu. "She listens really well, and always does what is asked of her."

With the end of this season, the Chiefs will lose quite a player in Ferko, an unsung hero if there ever was one.

Rocks stumble again

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Rocks once again had the better statistics, except for that all important one -- the final score.

Salem's struggling football team played a great defensive game against the high-powered offensive of Westland John Glenn last Friday. The Rocks held John Glenn to a lone field-goal, but that's all the Rockets needed, as the Rocks lost another heart-breaker 3-0.

Both teams were plagued by mistakes -- the Rocks turned the ball over three times, but John Glenn went one further with four turnovers of its own.

The Rocks defense was once again close to awesome, Dave Frigerio, Joe Jouppi, and Kurt Urban shut down the potent Rockets rushing offense.

Salem falls to 1-6 on the season, but looking back on the Rocks stats they should be a better football team than their record shows.

But Salem just can't win the close games; six of its games this year have been decided by two touchdowns or less.

Week after week the Rocks look better and better, and week after week they are referred to as a "good," or sometimes "great" team by other coaches in the area.

Although that idea may be getting old, it still holds true for the Rocks. To be good or great a team must do something the Rocks have not done all year and that is score.

Junior Steelers take 3 from Westland Comets

The Plymouth--Canton Steelers junior league football team held it's annual homecoming games over the weekend, as the Steelers could do nothing wrong.

The freshmen team played a hard fought defensive game. Andy Coburn scored the only touchdown of the game, on a six yard run, to lead his team to a 6-0 win.

The Steeler junior varsity team also came up with a homecoming victory, 16-0.

The junior varsity were lead by Jason Krueger who scored the two touchdowns for the Steelers, one on the ground and one through the air, by way of a pass from quarterback Ray Alvarado.

Dan Burke kicked both of the extra points as the J.V. held the Westland Comets scoreless.

In the varsity contest it was a high scoring affair as the Steelers defeated the Comets 33-22.

Liam Rentz got the scoring under way, as he dashed in on a six-yard run. Rentz, off a sweep, scored once again, on a 60-yard run.

Chad Johnson also scored for the Steelers, as he set up his own touchdown, on a 35-yard dash to the five yard line. Then Johnson stuck the ball in the endzone.

Mitch MacDonald later dove in from the four yard line, making the score 25-8 at half-time.

In the third quarter Johnson put the ball in the endzone one more time, giving the Steelers a dominating lead 31-8. The Comets came back to score two more touchdowns, but that just was not enough as the Steelers scored one more time, as Rentz tackled a Comet in the end-zone for a safety.

The win made it a sweet sweep for the Steelers over the weekend.

Salem kickers fall to Pioneer in districts

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Salem soccer team was once again awesome in its performance against Ypsilanti last Wednesday. The Rocks merced their hapless opponent by a score of 10-0.

Ted Hanosh lead all scorers as he made his mark in the school record book, by scoring three goals. This gave Hanosh 19 goals on the season. Dave O'Mally and Don Koontz once again combined for the shut out.

The Rocks then moved on to play Ann Arbor Pioneer, who came out and scored a quick three goals on the Rocks. "This stunned us," said Randy Balconi, "we controlled the ball for the rest of the game, but we just could not recover from those first three goals." As the Rocks lost to the high powered team from Ann Arbor 3-0.

The Rocks finished up their season Monday against Franklin. "The kids have played hard all season and I am proud of their efforts," said head coach Ken Johnson.

By beating Franklin Monday, the Rocks would accomplish more victories then any other Salem soccer team.

SALEM

GIRLS BASKETBALL -- The cagers kept on rolling, as the Rocks dumped Walled Lake Central 58-35. Junior forward Dena Head lead the Rocks with 20 points, followed by senior co-captain Jessica Handley who put in 16 points. This gives the cagers a 11-1 mark on the year.

FOOTBALL -- The Rocks lost another tight game. this time at the hands of Westland John Glenn, by a score of 3-0. Salem's defense played a great game. Senior co-captain Joe Jouppi lead the Rock's strong defense. This puts the Rocks at 1-6 on the year with two games remaining.

GIRLS TENNIS -- The netters did not fair well at the class A State Finals in Midland, as all but one of the Salem netters were knocked out of the finals after the first round. Lisa Belsky was the only survivor of the first round. Belsky did not last much longer, as she was defeated in round two. "We drew bad, when it came down to who was playing who in the finals," said Judy Braun. Full results of the competition will not be available until next week according to Braun.

SOCCER -- The kickers looked unbeatable as they destroyed Ypsilanti last Wednesday 10-0. Ted Hanosh had three goals, giving him four hat-tricks on the season. The Rocks goaltenders Don Koontz and Dave O'Mally combined for the shutout. The Rocks next played Ann Arbor Pioneer, a team head coach Ken Johnson called "strong and fast."

Pioneer came out and scored a quick three goals on the Rocks and won the district game 3-0. "This really surprised us, after all those shut-outs we just could not come back from Pioneer's quick three goals," Johnson said.

GIRLS SWIMMING -- The Rocks were again victorious, as they defeated Walled Lake Central 138-30. Salem did not lose a race. For the third week in a row Tina Aquino captured the diving title with a score of 170.7.

Canton's Parks and Recreation Women's Golf League concluded play last month and the winners were Kathie Zelek (for the first half of play) and Lou Skotzke (for the second half).

Chief runners finish perfect dual season

Canton's fine girls cross country team wrapped up a perfect season of dual meets with a 15-50 triumph over Northville last week.

The Chiefs finish the dual campaign with a 7-0 record and the Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA) western division dual title.

Canton finished in the first six spots, led by Lori Penland, who clocked 21:19 over the course. Sherry Figurski was second in 22:18, while Cindy Spessard finished third in 22:25.

Angie Miller was fifth for the Chiefs in 22:40, while Jenny Kincer finished sixth in 23:16.

The squad will compete in the class A regional at Buhr Park in Ann Arbor this Saturday, Oct. 25. Twenty teams will be on hand including powerhouses Ann Arbor Huron, Ann Arbor Pioneer, Farmington and local rival Salem.

"Our chances are negligible," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "There's just no way we can qualify as a team (the top three teams advance to states) with Pioneer, Huron and Farmington on hand."

"I'd like to hope Lori Penland has a chance," Przygodski said. "But I just don't know."

CHECK INTO THE HOSPITAL THIS WEEKEND

...and bring your whole family!

Here's some important information to help you plan your visit.

From Noon to 4:00 P.M. on Saturday and Sunday, you'll be able to take a self-guided tour through our beautiful, new hospital facilities. It'll be an interesting route, as you walk from department to department, all at your own pace.

Walk through the most advanced Nuclear Medicine department in the world and learn how physicians are using special technology to diagnose troubling illnesses.

Enter the space-age world of Diagnostic Radiology and see a CT scanner, a special facility to diagnose digestive problems, and a major unit designed for trauma victims.

Visit the Emergency Room and get a demonstration of C.P.R., learn how critically-ill infants are safely transported, and more.

Step into Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation and discover the creative ways we help patients regain their mobility.

Watch our "robo carriers" at work and see how this amazing, state-of-the-art robotic system delivers critical supplies throughout the hospital.

You and your family will learn about your body and mind and the latest tools and techniques to keep you healthy. Hands-on exhibits will be staffed to help you with your questions.

Here's just a sampling of what you'll see:

View an artificial heart that you've been reading and hearing about and watch how it works.

Get a surgeon's view of arthroscopic surgery while you guide a fiber optic scope through a model knee.

Receive a free first aid kit and talk with one of our flight nurses about the airborne emergency medical service we call Survival Flight.

Learn about stress management and how it can help your life.

Find out about a new medicine that's helping treat wrinkled and sun-damaged skin.

Visit our health careers exhibit and learn how students can plan for a career in the health professions, or hear about job opportunities at the Medical Center.

After the tour, relax in our beautiful courtyard and enjoy fresh cider and donuts on us. Ann Arbor's favorite bluegrass band, Footloose, will be performing toe-tapping favorites throughout the afternoon.

Health Care Center

Sunday, October 26,

from Noon to 4:00 PM

ou've watched the progress from the ground up ... now come inside to see the new University Hospital and Taubman Center!

We're opening the doors for you and your family this Saturday and Sunday from noon to 4:00 PM.

LEARN ABOUT US... AND ABOUT YOU!

Here's your chance to step behind-the-scenes and see why we've been called "the hospital of the future." When you visit, you'll learn about the exciting, new world of medicine and health care. And you'll also learn more about you — from the basics about your bones and muscles to new insights into your skin, your heart, your digestive system, and more. We'll even help you understand more about your mind and mental health.

You and your children can share in an intriguing journey through the human body ... as only the University of Michigan Medical Center can provide.

... the leading edge of medical science — you'll be fascinated by what you learn.

... our bright, contemporary surroundings — unlike any hospital, anywhere.

... our world renowned staff — experts in the human side of health care, too.
