

Twps. snub Super Sewer

BY T.M. SMITH
AND DAN NESS

The governing bodies of Canton, Plymouth and Northville townships have told Wayne County to take a long walk on a short sewer pipe.

The Plymouth and Canton township boards voted last Wednesday to negotiate with the Ypsilanti Community Utilities Authority (YCUA) to join that sewer system instead of the Son of Super Sewer system proposed by Wayne County.

The Northville Township board voted Tuesday night to also negotiate with YCUA to join that system.

The Plymouth and Canton boards designated $20,000 each for engineering and other fees to study the best way to transport sewage to the Ypsilanti treatment plant.

"There are several advantages to the Ypsilanti system, but the major one is that they have everything in place, and it does not need major improvements like Detroit does," Northville Supervisor Susan Heintz said.

The move west by the three communities, if they decide to join YCUA, was expected to postpone development of the Son of Super Sewer -- officially, the North Huron Valley Area/Rouge Valley sewer project -- until sometime next year, if not kill the project. Dr. Gordon Guyer, director of the state DNR, said he would have preferred the three communities to join the Super Sewer project, and that without them, it "probably wouldn't fly this year."

The Canton board had voted Sept. 9 not to join the Son of Super Sewer project. Northville and Plymouth townships have not voted either way on that system.

On Oct. 24, the DNR had warned Canton officials that no sewer construction permits would be processed by that department if the township did not develop a plan to dispose of excess rainwater and sewage that is pumped onto the ground in times of heavy rain. The DNR would have to approve any such plan for an expanded sewer system, and the Son of Super Sewer was one of the options Canton officials were offered.

On Oct. 31, the state attorney general's office clarified the situation, ruling that a sewer ban was not actually in effect for Canton. The DNR, however, was waiting for an alternative plan to be developed. "We've already indicated our next step," Guyer said. "They must have a plan that has our approval, or we've got to limit development. The ball is in their court."

The DNR must still approve the move to YCUA if the communities make a final decision to go to that system, Guyer said. "We'll sure be good partners in trying to help (Canton) out," he said. "We would have to see what their proposal is."

Noted local attorney Bob Delaney dies at 63

BY W. EDWARD WENDOVER

Robert Blaise Delaney, noted Plymouth attorney, died suddenly Tuesday morning at the age of 63.

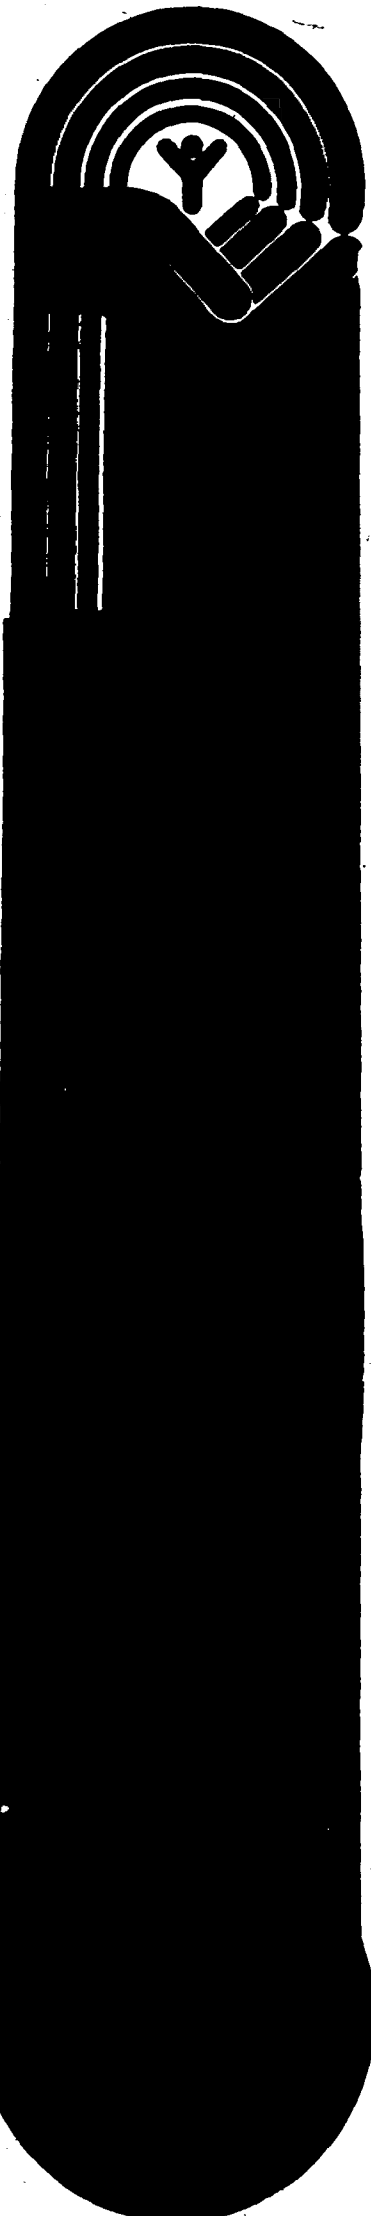

The sometimes-brusque, sometimes-bubbling lawyer was a friend of the common man, a windmill-tilter, the commodore of a yacht club without any boats and one of the few classically-educated intellectuals in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

His fame blossomed with his successful defense of two men charged with the highly publicized "Soup Kitchen Murder" in Detroit and the subsequent multi-million dollar lawsuits.

But to those who knew him locally, that success was not surprising.

As defense attorney he represented the only one of three defendants found not guilty in a sensational Canton murder, and was appointed by 35th District Judge Dunbar Davis to represent the indigent man accused of murder by arson in the Nelson Hotel-Old Village Inn fire.

Canton shoots for full-service hotel Booked up?

BY DAN NESS

Hotel companies are finding Canton -- and especially the I-275/Ford Road interchange -- a very attractive place to open new branches.

Canton officials are finding they may have too much of a good thing.

As a result, the township's community and economic development department is working on a new approval process for hotels in Canton. With a differently-structured process for approval, Canton could gain more leverage in negotiating with hotel chains in the future, with the ultimate goal of landing a "big name" full-service hotel, according to officials.

"There is a tremendous boom on hotel-room facilities," said David Nicholson, Canton's director of community and economic development. Most of those hotels, however, are not full-service hotels which include such features as swimming pools, banquet and meeting facilities, restaurants and entertainment lounges, Nicholson said.

Right now, Knight's Inn is the only hotel at I-275 and Ford Road. But, three hotels are being planned for that same interchange:

- a three-story Budgetel Inn is under construction south of Ford Road and west of I-275;

- a three-story, 132-room Marriott hotel is planned for the north side of Ford, east of Haggerty Road;

- a hotel is in the works east of I-275 and south of Ford Road to be included in a high-tech, executive park and convention center developed by Carlo Galuppi in both Westland and Canton. The hotel would sit in Canton, with a one-quarter mile section of Ford Road frontage.

"They are talking about a full-service hotel for the Galuppi site," Nicholson said. However, the other two hotels would not be classified as full-service facilities, Nicholson said.

The Canton Planning Commission directed Nicholson's staff Oct. 27 to come up with proposals toward a new policy for approving site plans for hotels that are not full-service, according to planning commissioner Loren Bennett. "We are very close to saturating that market with what's on the drawing board," Bennett said.

"We're getting a little bit nervous that we may find ourselves without a full-service hotel," he said.

The planning staffers may propose a point-system for the hotels interested in opening in Canton, Nicholson said. Hotel projects would be rated by how many features they offer in their plans, which would be considered by the planning commission and township board of trustees in approving site plans.

The staff is also considering making certain properties open to hotels by special approval only, Nicholson said. "We're drafting up some proposals for the commission right now," he said.

The planning commission had no deadline for Nicholson's staff to bring the proposals back to it, Bennett said.

In addition, Canton officials are negotiating with another hotel chain for a possible hotel to be located on Michigan Avenue. That hotel would have between 130 and 140 rooms, and would be "just a step below a full-service hotel," according to Nicholson.

Why are all the hotels looking at Canton now?

Canton's location between Ann Arbor, downtown Detroit and Metro Airport are the main reasons, according to the Budgetel representative. "I-275 is the real growth corridor," said Tom Guastello, an attorney representing Budgetel Inns. "It was an area that you just couldn't ignore.

P-C's new school will have Boyne City design

BY KEN VOYLES

The new elementary school in The Plymouth-Canton Community will have an old look.

On Monday, the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Trustees unanimously passed a resolution to follow the plans of a school already in use in Boyne City.

A committee from the district looked at over 20 different schools from 12 architectural firms before recommending using the Boyne City Elementary design by Wakely Associates Inc., of Mt. Pleasant and Warren.

The board followed up that recommendation on Monday with a resolution to award the architectural contract to Wakely at a professional fee of 2.3 to 3.7 per cent (or $95,000 to $125,000) for site adaption and reuse, with minor revisions, of the Boyne documents.

According to Superintendent John M. Hoben the district will save nearly $185,000 by using the design of an already existing building.

Professional fees for designing a new elementary school would have run anywhere from five to six per cent, according to consultants from Barton-Malow, of Detroit, the school's project management firm.

Some minor changes in the design will have to be made, according to the consultants, but mostly for interior changes and not the "shell" of the building.

The new elementary is tentatively slated to be built on a site along Saltz Road in Canton between Canton Center and Sheldon.

"We're asking them to duplicate a building built before to save this community more than $150,000," said Board President E.J. McClendon.

The original Boyne design cost $1,298,000 back in 1977. Today it houses 650 students in 50,220 square feet of space, with about 901 square feet per classroom.

"We're buying the basic plans and items without substantial changes," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business.

Wakely also won the contract Monday to renovate Central Middle School. The company's Mt. Pleasant office will handle the new elementary design, while the Warren office works on the Central renovations, according to Hoedel.

The board will approve all drawings before the district seeks bid specifications on the various aspects of construction, said Hoedel.

Committee rules out 'Sorcerer'

BY KEN VOYLES

A report released yesterday by the committee reviewing the movie "The Sword and the Sorcerer" suggests it be "excluded from use" in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools at "this time."

The report, as filed by committee members teacher Sheila Alles, librarian Marguerite Vollrath, administrator Richard Egli, and parents Louise Townley and Carol Levitte, said the film was "based upon repeated, exaggerated, intense, visually explicit and overwhelming violence."

The report also said that the film was "neither a realistic nor factual portrayal of castles, dress, weapons and way of life during the Middle Ages," which was one of the purposes for showing it.

The review group met four times beginning on Monday, Oct. 27. They last met on Wednesday, Nov. 5.

During that time the group screened the movie on video tape; interviewed East Middle School teacher Maureen Krause about her use of the film to reach instructional goals; and met with Diane Daskalakis and her associate Laurie Donati about the basis of their complaint.

Twp. boy dies in mishap

An 11-year-old Plymouth Township boy died Sunday afternoon after the riding mower he was driving tipped over into a pond trapping him underneath, Plymouth Township police said.

The boy, Erin Lowman, was pronounced dead at Oakwood Hospital after rescue and hospital officials spent more than an hour attempting to revive the boy, Deputy Chief Chip Snider said.

Snider said that it appeared Lowman was mowing Walter Clark's lawn at 45505 North Territorial, when the mower tipped into the pond nearby, trapping the boy underneath.

Police were called when Lowman was discovered missing by Clark. It wasn't until the mower was found upside down in the pond, and Clark and police attempted to remove the mower that Lowman's body was discovered pinned underneath.

"We think that the boy might have lost control on the steep grade by the pond, and when he discovered he was going into the water, he tried to jump off but he must have gotten caught up somewhere," Snider said.

In the Oct. 29 issue, it should have been indicated that all areas open to hunting under local law still require the written permission of the landowner. There is no hunting allowed anywhere except by permission of the landowner, and trespassers can be prosecuted.

More results from Election Day

BY T. M. SMITH
AND DAN NESS

With the final vote cast, the victors taking all their spoils, losers making plans for another year and election signs disappearing from the front yards -- the 1986 general election has been dedicated to the history books.

Still, there are several untold stories that are unique, corny or odd enough that they beg to be told. In fact they cry out for some public attention, which they rightly deserve.

For instance:

• At Plymouth Township Hall, clerk Esther Hulsing was a breath away from giving her brand new election computer a swift kick Tuesday evening, and early Wednesday morning after its repeated failures. She is lucky her hair color has completed its silver cast, so as to hide the added grey she gained from the computer.

The exact cause of the problem that forced Plymouth Township to wait until 4 a.m. to finish is still unknown, but Esther plans to find out.

"We don't know what was wrong, it just quit. And we haven't heard boo from them, I've fired off several letters on the matter," Hulsing said.

It was clear as late as Monday that the matter still had Hulsing in an uproar.

"When they came to pick up the equipment they lent us, I told them just to take our equipment to, because we didn't want it... but now I'll just settle for it to work," she said.

This is just the second election

Plymouth Township's new punch card computer has gone through, and both times there have been snags.

"Last election it was a simple problem, but this was a little more involved," she said.

Still Hulsing swears by the new equipment, saying "it really is wonderful equipment, many other people use them around the state, we just have to get the bugs worked out."

• Election workers in the City of Plymouth's 2nd Precinct found themselves challenged by that precinct's last voter -- Austin "Woody" Lynch -- who charged that he couldn't vote for write-in candidates on the voting machines.

Lynch, who showed up at 7:58 p.m., made it known to all within hearing distance -- and The-Crier, by phone -- that he would be voting for Olivia Newton-John, Charles Bronson and Sylvester Stallone for the state's top offices, as a protest of this year's political offerings.

Lynch battled the voting machine for nearly 20 minutes, telling tired precinct workers that the machine was basically flawed in its write-in candidate apparatus. City police officers were called to the scene when precinct workers had decided they had given enough instruction and taken enough verbal abuse.

If looks could unplug . . .

Lynn Peedin best glare didn't make Plymouth Township's ballott counter fix itself, it took hours of staring to fix it...

Said one veteran precinct worker, shaking her head, "They should screen everyone coming in here before they can vote."

• "Mr. Punchy" made a command performance in Canton, after his successful debut during the Aug. 5 primary.

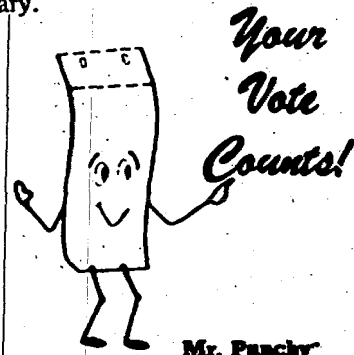

...but fixing the machine didn't help the frustration many felt that night regardless of what their buttons said. (Crier photos by Kelly Sauter)

The affable punch-card character, known only by his formal "Mr. Punchy" title, has been copyrighted by the Canton Township clerk's office, and is used to instruct voters on the new punch-card voting system. Clerk Linda Chuhran reported that there were no cross-over votes in the Aug. 5 primary, where a cross-over vote would invalidate a ballot, and she gave most of the credit to the thin, green Punchy.

Said Punchy, "Your vote counts!"

• Some Canton voters, however, were not as happy as Mr. Punchy on Election Day.

According to informed sources, some voters who tried to turn in absentee ballots on Nov. 4 were told that they were too late by the Clerk's office and that they could not vote.

According to state law, absentee voters can still vote until the polls close on Election Day, but apparently these voters were not told that initially.

CEP Band takes 14th

The Centennial Education Park (CEP) Marching Band ranked 10th musically and 14th overall last weekend at the Marching Bands of America Grand National Championships in Indianapolis, Ind.

"We are extremely proud of the students and their performance at the Grand Nationals," Band Director James R. Griffith said.

The band received a score of 80.55 to rank 14th overall out of 46 competing bands from across the country.

The top five bands were from North Carolina, New York, Illinois, Oklahoma and Mississippi. The Rocky Mount High band from Rocky Mount, North Carolina was crowned the grand national champion.

The 1987 Grand Nationals are tentatively slated for the Pontiac Silverdome on Nov. 13-14.

Tonight the band will be honored at a banquet held in Canton's cafeteria. Special guests for the evening will be the 48 graduating seniors and their parents. More than 500 people are expected to turn out for the event.

The band's final show for this year will be the annual "Variety Is" show on Jan. 23-24 at Salem's auditorium.

Daskalakis to debate teacher on Omnicom

BY KEN VOYLES

Call it the great debate if you will.

David Seemann, an English teacher at Canton, will face Christian crusader Diane Daskalakis in a cable television forum being taped this afternoon.

The debate will be featured on the program "Human Images."

It will be taped at 3 p.m. today in the Omnicom studios and then be broadcast in its regular time slot next Monday, Nov. 17, at 9 p.m., according to John Martin, an executive producer at Omnicom.

The program is aired on public access channel 15. It will also be repeated on Wednesday, Nov. 19 at 5:30 p.m.

Seemann said he was chosen to represent those who oppose Daskalakis because he is "used to dealing with loftier questions."

Seemann teaches English at CEP, but has a master's degree in philosophy from Wayne State University. He has also been involved with the teacher's union in various leadership roles.

Using the debate format, both Seemann and Daskalakis will get the opportunity to respond to a series of questions from a panel of three CEP students. There will also be a summation at the end, according to Seemann.

"She declined to be on the show at first," said Seemann. "But then she agreed with some conditions."

According to Seemann, Daskalakis requested to have the names and home phone numbers of each student on the panel, the right to contact their parents, and a complete list of the questions in advance of today's taping.

"I told the show's producers I would be perfectly happy if she gets all the questions in advance," Seemann said. He added that it did not matter if he received the questions beforehand.

Some of the topics to be discussed this afternoon include religion's place in the schools, the use of R-rated movies in the schools and academic freedom.

"Human Images" is an ongoing project run by the CEP Psychology Club in conjunction with Omnicom. Mike LaSota is the student leader for the program and Mike McCauley is the faculty advisor.

CEP singers selected for honors choir

The following CEP Vocal Music Department students were selected through extensive auditions recently to sing in the Michigan School Vocal Association (MSVA) Senior High Regional Honors Choir:

Seniors: Sara Erickson, soprano;

Hather Keehn, soprano; Kerri Flynn, alto; Sheila Harris, alto; Ann Janette Cuper, alto; Stephan Otten, baritone.

Juniors: Jennifer Cherry, alto; Michael Kavalhuna, baritone.

Sophomores: Amy Pennington, soprano; Cory Cox, bass.

Freshman: Paul Croll, tenor.

These students will now memorize four additional pieces of music and audition again on Saturday, Dec. 13. On that day, a total of 300 singers state-wide will be chosen as members of the three Senior High State Honors Choirs for 1987.

County program in Ply. center of controversy

BY T.M. SMITH
The two co-sponsors of a seven-month old Alternative Community Work Force program are pointing fingers at each other in blame for the program's dismal state.

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano has said the County Office of Public Services has misused funds for the program, calling it "a blatant waste of taxpayers money."

Officials at OPS have denied misuse of any money, and have claimed the failure of the program is due to the inability of the sheriff to sell the program to the courts.

"I think this is a classic example of a little egg in the face. I just don't have the time, blood pressure or patience to explain to the sheriff how a federal grant works," Mark Edmunds of OPS said.

The program in question began last April as a means to reduce the overcrowded jails, while getting some work out of non-felony offenders. It is designed as a work detail for convicted criminals to do manual labor for the county.

The program is housed in the Wilcox Yard building on Wilcox and Hines Drive in Plymouth Township.

Turmoil began 10 days ago with a news article that appeared in the Sunday Detroit News which quoted several county officials as saying the program was failing, and instead of saving taxpayers money, it was actually costing more.

Edmunds who directs the purchasing for the program for OPS said the program was designed to reduce costs from $50 to $60 a day down to $25 to $30 a day, but that has not happened. Instead it has increased. (The News reported a figure of $500 a day.)

"We need bodies to make the program work, and as of yet we have not had a salesman to get those bodies," Edmunds said.

Ficano, however, denies responsibility and points to OPS as the place of failure, claiming misuse of funds by that department.

The money in question is a matching grant from the federal government for $90,000, which the county will match dollar for dollar, according to Edmunds.

The Sheriff Department does not mention the matching portion of the grant either in its press release or in a phone interview.

Ficano has accused OPS of overspending on equipment, purchasing items which are not part of the program and showing inventories which do not exist.

"They have purchased power tools that are not supposed to be used by prisoners, they hired a guard service for $14,000 and there are countless items they show they have purchased that we just cannot find," Ficano said.

The sheriff is referring to an inventory sheet submitted Sept. 19 by OPS, which outlines almost $35,000 worth of equipment. Ficano, however, sent deputies in to perform an actual on-sight inventory where only $12,772.25 worth of the equipment was found, the press release showed.

Edmunds denies any misspending on the part of OPS.

"That press release he sent is incorrect and he (Ficano) knows it, those were costs on anticipated budget items, not actual costs," Edmunds said.

And he said the claim by the sheriff that OPS overspent is wrong because of the matching grant.

"It is not just $90,000, it means that it is a 50-50 match between the county and the federal government. We would have had to go over $180,000 to overspend, and we aren't close to that," Edmunds said.

Edmunds said the issue is more Ficano's inability to sell the program to area courts to supply people to the program.

Once the judges begin sentencing the people to work in the program it will work well, Edmunds said.

"It is like having a brand new car in the driveway without any gasoline," he said.

Ficano said he has been to see the courts and can document his visits and that it is beginning to pick up.

"We are just starting to get the momentum," Ficano said.

Both Ficano and Edmunds said they were unsure of the future of the program, or what action might be taken from this point.

Canton man sentenced

A Canton man was sentenced to two years probation and a $1,000 fine for failing to file a currency transaction report with the IRS while an employe of Michigan National Bank of Dearborn.

James F. Perkins, 37, pled guilty in September of "willfully and knowingly failing to file currency transaction reports" and admitted to the U.S. Department of Justice attorney's office in Detroit that he had processed a cash transaction in excess of $10,000 for the Michael P. Vogel drug smuggling organization, according to U.S. Attorney Roy Hayes.

A Rochester man was also sentenced for an identical charge, according to the U.S. Attorney's office.

The investigation was conducted by the Detroit offices of the FBI, the Michigan State Police and the IRS, Criminal Investigation Division.

Nip censorship now Give the rights back to the parents

It is clearly time our schools put this nonsense to rest. Certain sectors of our society -- who would speak for the entire, diverse community we live in -- have succeeded in making the school board devise review committees for films, books and other teaching materials that they deem immoral.

Since when can a minority tell the majority what is "correct" for them to consider in an entire educational package?

At the least, this most recent effort of filibustering on behalf of the few has caused a serious divergence of school resources, personnel and, ultimately, tax dollars from the real goals of education. At the most, this censorship is limiting the scope of our children's education and making a mockery of our schools' standard of "Students first."

Specifically, the efforts of Diane Daskalakis to purge the types of information she finds unacceptable from the schools only calls more attention to that which she would keep in the dark, thereby rendering her crusade ineffective. How many of the students that saw "The Breakfast Club" thought twice about the so-called "offensive" portions of the film until they were constantly reminded of them by those who would censor?

Not many. They were exposed to real-life incidents like the scenes-in-question in the film before they even reached the end of middle school. Daskalakis' motherly, over-protective instincts would be better put to use at the elementary level, where there would be more students who have not been exposed to life's realities firsthand.

Unfortunately, Daskalakis' arguments play on the emotions of people involved, which reduces the chance of compromise in this situation. To her way of thinking, there is no middle ground -- only her way and the "wrong" way. Anyone so bold as to challenge her theory of education is challenging a greater truth, in her mind, which is wrong in itself.

Once again, the whole argument comes back to freedom of expression and freedom from persecution from those who hold differing opinions. The religious fanatics should remember that it is the First Amendment to our Constitution which guarantees those basic freedoms -- the same amendment which also guards the religious freedom of all, including the religious fanatics in our community.

Striking at this tenet of our nation's freedom and strength only weakens the rights of all to free speech and discourages the exchange of information that would lead to better understanding, which is what education is all about.

The students, who have admirably set aside society's fabricated classifications of fellow human beings, have rightfully joined in protesting this imbalance of power to the few, self-righteous persons who suddenly have more say than other people in the community.

The schools are taking away the right of the parent to decide what is best for their children in education. It is time they give that right back.

community opinions

Please respect other's beliefs...

EDITOR:

How much longer is our community going to allow one woman's activities to take up so much of our school administrators' time?

I suspect that I am not the only person in town that is very irritated by my tax dollars being spent to pay administrators to talk to Diane Daskalakis, to talk to the press about Diane, to evaluate the "complaints" about Diane, to talk to teachers about Diane's charges of devil worship, to set up committees to study Diane's charges, to serve on panels to evaluate Diane's charges etc., etc., etc..

These administrators are highly paid professionals whose time could be far better spent on administrating our school district, not worrying about Don Quixote's windmills! I would like to have their time spent on their appointed tasks.

I am trying to respect Diane's values as a Christian, as she should respect the values of others choice of worship. Her attempts to block out of our schools teachers of the goodness of other faiths, or viewpoints different than her own, violates our constitution. I thought our Founding Fathers settled this whole problem two hundred years ago!

The problem of inflicting the "right" idea and excluding the "wrong" ideas (translated as those which do not agree with Diane) is ... who is to decide which is "right" and which is "wrong"? It smacks of Nazi Germany! I strive to be a Christian but that does not mean I cannot respect the beliefs of others and their right to their beliefs.

Please allow our voted tax dollars to be spent as the voters of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools District intended -- to educate our students.

EDITOR:

Perhaps there is something in the time of the year that brings out certain behaviors.

Just over a year ago I served on a parent-teacher committee that reviewed a complaint concerning a talk on witchcraft to be given at the high school. We rejected the complaint and the talk was given.

The large number of complaints (nine I believe) filed by Mrs. Daskalakis because she is apparently concerned about the use of certain films and other materials, shows that we are dealing with an escalating challenge to quality education in our district.

My purpose in writing this letter is to make a point that Mrs. Daskalakis and others like her clearly do not understand.

I have two children who graduated recently from the Plymouth-Canton Schools. The education they received was excellent. It was excellent because the school system has a long history of hiring highly qualified teachers and letting them teach. There is ample protection against poor educational practices built into the school system's procedures.

It angers and saddens me greatly that Mrs. Daskalakis and others like her feel they have a mandate of some kind to censor teaching in our schools. If these efforts were to succeed, the quality of education would plummet. Good teaching cannot be carried out when special interest groups constantly butt in.

I call on the board of education to resist concessions to Mrs. Daskalakis and others like her.

Diane missed a good movie

EDITOR:

I am writing to you about the Diane Daskalakis/"The Breakfast Club" issue. Let me begin by saying: 1. No, I don't have any children in the Plymouth-Canton school system; 2.) I am 28 years old; 3.) I have seen "The Breakfast Club" four times.

Ms. Daskalakis really missed a good movie! Anyone who watched the movie with an open mind would have found the story of five kids from different social groups who never would have looked twice at the others, let alone had a conversation about anything with them, had it not been for having to serve detention together. They got to know each other and discovered, not a stereotype, but a human being with the same thoughts, feelings and peer-related problems. Yes, there are drugs and foul language, however, that is precisely why movies have ratings. This movie is clearly rated 'R' and I doubt she was forced to watch it.

Unlike so many of the movies out today, "The Breakfast Club" has a message -- don't judge someone based on their appearance or who their friends are. After seeing this movie, I hope I am not as quick to judge others. I highly recommend "The Breakfast Club" to anyone with an open mind.

A worthwhile sale, a charming man

Right on our doorsteps, we'll have the ability to see one of the most impressive private art collections in southeastern Michigan -- in fact, even to own a part of it.

The art collection of Monsignor Edward J. Hickey -- assembled from his several trips to Europe and his aggressive patronage of American artists -- will be sold off this Friday and Saturday at the Mayflower Meeting House. (From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday and from noon until 6 p.m. Saturday.)

It hopefully will be a fitting breakup of an artistic collection that crossed paths with The Plymouth-Canton Community twice before.

From December, 1968 until mid-1971, part of the padre's art collection was housed in the Art Guild - St. Mary's gallery at 687 Ann Arbor Trail (at Deer Street) until the building came down to make room for that intersection's widening.

This is a drawing of the store Hickey used to sell art in Plymouth from 1968-1971.

Dorothy McNamara, who managed that gallery and who, with her husband, Leo, still host Mon. Hickey on his Plymouth visits from Redford, said she was disappointed that the gallery had to go at that time. "The Monsignor stood all the renovation costs (of the building)," she said.

Sadly, those days were not exceptionally successful for the gallery, the pleasant cleric revealed.

It was before the boom hit Plymouth-Canton and art sales weren't high. Since then, the growth of the community has added extra fuel to the artistic fires that burn brightly enough to make The Plymouth-Canton Community shine as a cultural hotspot in Wayne County.

But the gallery's days were not the first time this collection saw Plymouth.

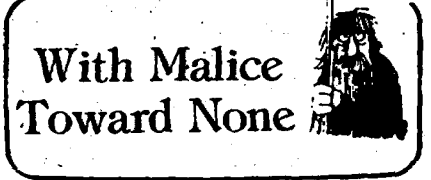

During the Detroit riots in 1967, some felt the Monsignor's collection was in jeopardy. A number of Michigan Bell Telephone employees joined together to move the Detroit-based exhibit to safety -- in Plymouth.

The benefactor? Ralph Lorenz allowed the collection to be stored at the Mayflower Meeting House -- the site of the sale this weekend.

Now, as Hickey approaches the age of 93 (he hits that milestone on Dec. 13) he's selling his collection to share the art and raise money for the causes he supports. Where the Meeting House once served as a haven for the art treasures, it now provides the venue to pass the artwork on to others.

Even for those not buying art, this

By W. Edward WENDOVER

With Malice
Toward None

weekend's sale provides a great opportunity to observe several important art pieces.

But with any luck, the sale might exceed Hickey's expectations. That would be a great payback for the years the community couldn't adequately support the little art building on Ann Arbor Trail and Deer Street.

A good sale this weekend would prove that this charming man (who met Teddy Roosevelt in Africa) was years ahead of his time.

The sale is Friday and Saturday at the Mayflower Meeting House from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and open to the public.

The sale is being handled by Schmidt's Antiques at 5138 W. Michigan Ave. in Ypsilanti. Many other pieces of Mon. Hickey's collection are there.

CLUB FLAG AT HALF MAST

Bob proves Box Bar beam wrong

The Commodore went down with the ship.

Bob Delaney died at his office before court early yesterday.

But everything he did lives on.

Modern justice in the 35th District and Circuit Courts; the Tonquish Creek Yacht Club; open government in local township and city halls; rights of the "little guys;" young people's interest in literature, geology, astronomy, law and the media -- all these things saw at least some of Bob's influence.

DELANEY AS TONQUISH CREEK YACHT CLUB COMMODORE

Bob took the "little guy's" side in life. He eschewed the Round Table Club in favor of the Square Table Club.

Unpopular causes and against-all-odds criminal defenses were his specialty.

Many's the time that some slick Downtown Detroit attorney mistook Bob for a bumbling, disheveled, small-town lawyer -- but they only made that mistake once.

Bob's success in the courtroom came from courting the clerks, not the judges. In one case he'd be arguing against a local policeman on behalf of his client, in the next case he'd be representing the policeman on a personal matter.

He also currently served as a hearing officer for the State of Michigan Racing Commissioner's office.

Young reporters, businesspeople and friends spent long evenings in the counselor's workshop, sitting on lathes and old tractors while engaged in lively debate over the topics of the day, the evening and the future. Grand MacNish was occasionally invited.

Poking fun at The Plymouth-Canton Community establishment was one of Bob's favorite themes at those late-night and weekend sessions.

Out behind the workshop, Bob was going to build an academy to train intellectuals in all the important areas of arts, sciences and letters. That project was going to start just as soon as he wrapped up the long-running, knock-down, drag-out OTAC multi-million dollar court case. Of course, the book would follow on the case's successful conclusion first -- and then the much promised fishing trip off the Florida Keys.

"He was truly a kind and concerned man," says Kenn Christopher, not one generally given to saying nice things about attorneys on the record.

It's difficult, for most people, to like attorneys. The day that Herman Halprin stenciled in the slogans on the Box Bar beams -- including, "An honest lawyer dies poor" -- Bob took umbrage. It sparked one of the liveliest afternoon-long debates on the ethics of law ever seen in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

Bob proved that stenciled slogan wrong.

He was an honest lawyer who died rich for what he gave the world and for his many friendships.

Thanks for Trahey story

EDITOR:

Thank you for featuring in your publication one of Madonna College's students, namely Tim Trahey, a resident of this community. Thank you to Tim Trahey for sharing his story about helping others as well as sharing with this community his view of Madonna College as a "fantastic school" where "the people are real special" including the faculty.

Madonna College, located on the northwest section of 196 and Levan Road, had been serving the Plymouth-Canton area for 40 years as a four year college and as an employer of many persons living in this community.

The community is invited to consider attending Madonna College. The college has many fine programs that serve to meet the needs of students of all ages. Visit us at our Open House on Sunday, Nov. 16, 1986. You will find that the college has a warm, friendly campus with faculty and staff who care about its students. Sewer symposiums make unwilling experts Plumbers may soon be able to keep busy in Canton once again.

With the move last week of Canton, Northville and Plymouth townships to an Ypsilanti sewer treatment plant instead of the now-infamous Son of Super Sewer, Canton residents in particular may be able to get back to talking about their gardens and their kids instead of combined sewer overflows and the comparative merits of sewer vents rather than larger sewer pipe.

These resident sewer experts have been very unwilling to learn so much about waste management, mind you. They didn't ask to have flooded basements, and later on, a threatened sewer ban by the state DNR. But the upshot of the whole Son of Super Sewer fiasco is that the average Cantonite knows more about his/her sewer system than they do about their own sprinkler system.

Ask a Cantonite how much pipe it would take to drain a modern-day subdivision, and odds are they could tell you within a few cubic feet of sewage flow per second, much to their chagrin.

If Canton residents are experts of that system that nobody sees but everyone hears about, certain officials of Canton, Northville and Plymouth townships deserve to have honorary engineering degrees in waste management bestowed upon them. Jim Poole, Canton's Son of Super Sewer laureate, has been the most visible of those Sons of Super Experts, holding conferences with homeowners and developers, using charts and diagrams to impart some of his new-found waste wisdom.

And Poole claims that Maurie Breen is the real expert. Sewer experts do tend to be modest.

Poole's biggest problem with Wayne County's project, which he has dubbed "Son of Super Silly," is the red tape he's had to deal with at the DNR. Poole says he has no problem with DNR Director Gordon Guyer, but that his staff stinks, so to speak. "He's surrounded by reptiles," Poole recently said. "He's gonna have to separate the vipers from the garters." He wasn't smiling when he said that, either.

I don't feel quite so strongly about those lizards in Lansing, but I can empathize with Poole. Recently, on an unrelated matter, I spoke with the Chief of the Site Assessment Unit of the Remedial Action Section of the Groundwater Quality Division of the Department of Natural Resources, nearly suffocating in repeating his title for clarification. Very helpful fellow, if I could only remember his name. DNR staffers who speak the language can help me out here.

But, back to the experts. At one of Poole's sewer symposiums, two Brookside Village residents discussed, in almost intimidating technical terms, their respective sewer situations. The man knew of a pumping system that was relatively inexpensive (in other words, less than the cost of damages to a flooded basement) while the woman expounded upon different sewer pipe capacities along Haggerty Road.

To The Point

By Dan Ness

Residents should not have to hold such discussions, let alone be so informed on that subject.

Like Plymouthites and trains, Northvillians and harness racing, and Livonians and pavement, Cantonites have involuntarily become experts in a field not chosen by them. Hopefully, if everything works out with the Ypsilanti sewer system, Cantonites will soon be so ignorant when it comes to sewers that plumbers will be called on once again to solve their problems.

And that's an ignorance all Cantonites would be happy to live with.

Goodfellows need help

EDITOR:

"No child without a Christmas," the Goodfellow pledge.

It's a pledge we plan to keep again this year, but it's getting harder.

The people of Plymouth and Plymouth Township are generous enough, even though many of them can't believe we have needy kids in town. We have plenty of kids who will have no Christmas without help from the Goodfellows. However, the Goodfellows need help from you.

We don't have enough members, paper sales people, buyers, or wrappers. We can't get the presents to the kids if no one wants to help buy or wrap them.

We do all of our shopping and wrapping in December. That's the busiest time of year for everyone and no one seems to have time to devote one or two days or evenings for this good cause.

Are there any individuals or groups in Plymouth or Plymouth Township who might want to spend a few hours of their time to help our needy children? We know your Christmas will be fuller, knowing that some boy or girl will get clothes and toys because you cared enough to help.

How I had to wait for (cold) pizza

It was election day and as a part of The Crier editorial staff I helped out getting precinct results in Plymouth Township.

Well my leader, Ed Wendover said, "Marty why don't you head over to the Plymouth Township Hall and get some election results." "Great," I said, but the staff of The Crier started to laugh.

Little did I know that Nov. 4 was going to be a night I will never forget.

On arrival at Township Hall, I was greeted by warm friendly Republicans. They aren't so bad, I thought. I sat next to a woman who was getting election results for ABC, NBC, CBS, UPI, and AP.

Her name was Diane, and her last name sounded like go-bots. Then the ballots started to arrive. It was about 10:15 p.m. before they were all in.

It sure is getting late, I thought. Hope this doesn't take long. A gentleman named Sam Durante assured me that the new punch cards would be counted with great speed, and that I would be back at The Crier to enjoy some pizza, and watch the election results come in.

The cards were starting to go through this high tech machine, when suddenly today's technology made a strange sound and I heard the words that would make me miss warm pizza,

Land of Confusion

By Marty Tungate

"Uh oh." Uh oh what, I thought.

We all rushed up to the computer to find it wasn't working right.

An attempt to fix the dying machine failed. Now what?

Esther Hulsing rushed to the phone. Diane was worried, as was I. "This is great," she said. Esther returned to the room to assure us that another computer was on the way. From Canton, I thought. "Dearborn Heights," Esther said.

I called my leader to inform him of the computer's death. "O.k.," Ed said. "Call us when the new machine gets there. We'll send a photographer over to get some shots." "Great," I said.

Well the wait was on. Sam and I decided to run across Ann Arbor Road to get some pop. We made idle chat there and back.

After a half hour the illustrious machine arrived, now everything will move along just fine we were assured. But the woman who brought the machine did not know how to hook it up.

Sam grabbed one wire and I grabbed another, and we had that baby hooked up in minutes. "Ok, were ready to roll Lynne," Sam said.

They began to run the new punch cards through the machine only to learn that the printer was not printing out the results.

Back on the phone: "Hello is God there," I said. I told my leader the bad news. He replied, "We'll save you some pizza."

Great.

Diane and I sat and talked about our paper and how she "hates" that "other paper."

The situation was getting serious. Lynne called the company that owned the computer, and they had no idea what was happening.

I thought, we're going to be here forever, stuck in Township Hall to wait and wait for a computer to work, that will never work. We're in the Land of Confusion.

It was now approaching 1 a.m. and Ed showed his noble face at the Township Hall. He gave me some encouraging words to hang tough, and with a blink of an eye he was gone.

Finally the problem was discovered by Sam. It's this thing, he said. "This thing" was another part of the computer. Lynne had a new one in her car, Sam and we rushed out to get it, I had that baby hooked up in a jiff.

At last at 1 a.m. we were running the election results.

With about three more to go, Diane and I sat and discussed how we loved the compulsive liar from Saturday Night Live. We were losing it.

After a few cracks about his act, I made the comment, "Wouldn't it be funny if the printer stopped printing?" "Ha ha," Diane said.

Suddenly a cry came from the crowd around the printer. It happened -- the machine stopped printing. The band of faithfuls who remained all started to look at me funny, as if I had some strange power. "Really it wasn't me," I pleaded.

It appeared I was going to be shot, when suddenly that little baby magically started to run again.

We finished tallying the results, said our goodbyes until the next election, and we were free.

Worldly priest

Life, art and God

BY KEN VOYLES

The little old white haired man shows off some of his prize works of art. It's hard to believe he's 92 -- he looks more like 75 -- and that he's been around for nearly a century.

It's less hard to believe he is Michigan's oldest active priest and somewhat of a legend in the local art world. There is an air about him that makes the blending of those distinct callings seem not only natural but inspired.

And Monsignor Edward J. Hickey is inspiring.

Maybe it's his soft, clear voice, or the fatherly smile that enhances the noble facial features. Or better yet maybe it's just his simple enthusiasm for life, art and God (not necessarily in that order) which sets him apart.

Last week the monsignor returned to Plymouth relating the "interesting experiences" which have made up his long and fruitful life.

Hickey isn't a stranger to Plymouth - from 1968 to 1971 he ran an art gallery on Deer Street. Although it didn't do as well as the other three galleries he's operated over a 30-year period, the monsignor is not one to forget his friends.

"I've been across the ocean to Europe 23 times," Hickey said. "All the customs people know me on a first name basis.

"I still have a taste for it (buying art)," he continued. "But it's tough to get anything out of Europe nowadays. Nothing over 200 years old is allowed out anymore."

Hickey purchased his first painting, "Head of Christ," in 1910 at the tender age of 16 on his first trip to Europe, a three month sojourn around the Mediterranean basin.

Since then Hickey has bought and sold thousands of paintings collected all over Europe. All of the proceeds -- $60,000 in one year alone -- have been used to help the needy.

"I've had some beautiful ones," Hickey said. "One man bought a work for $300 and told me recently he was offered $10,000 for it."

A graduate of U-D High and the University of Detroit, Hickey then attended Harvard Business School where he earned an MBA before entering the priesthood.

A glamorous career in business seemed to await him but instead he joined the priesthood in 1919. "You can't help but get that idea after attending U-D," said Hickey. "I made my mind up to stick with it."

In doing so, Hickey turned his back on his family's wealth and position (his father worked his way up to a vice-president post with J.L. Hudson's) for a more rewarding life as a parish priest.

Hickey opened his first gallery in 1956 after his father passed away. With the addition of his father's collection of art he possessed nearly 3,000 paintings, sculptures, and prints.

"My father had so many of them I decided to sell them to raise money for the poor," said Hickey. His first two galleries were on Grand River before he opened a third on Livernois.

The 1967 Detroit riots forced Hickey to move his collection to Plymouth to save it from destruction. Dorthy McNamara, and her husband Leo McNamara, of Plymouth, are long time friends who have helped Hickey run all four of the galleries.

"The monsignor is one of the most avid flea market visitors I've seen," said Leo McNamara. "He used to go to four or five every Sunday."

In fact, Hickey spent some of his happiest times at open air flea markets in Rome, Madrid, Paris and Mexico City.

One of Hickey's prize possessions may or may not be worth millions of dollars. The painting, which he found at Schmidt's, could very well turn out to be a Rembrandt.

"I think it's a portrait of Judas, but all the books say Rembrandt didn't paint one of Judas," Hickey said. "It's not for sale until we can get it authenticated."

"In 15 years they'll probably say it's his masterpiece," he continued. The work cost Hickey $450 and might bring as much as $5 million if it turns out to be a Rembrandt.

Hickey cited several reasons for his belief that the work is indeed an original Rembrandt: It was painted on a oak block as Rembrandt often did; it pictures an old Jewish man with the figure of Satan standing behind him dangling a sword; and in the figure's beard Hickey says one can make out the Greek letters for the word Judas.

Today the Rembrandt remains safely hidden.

Another work of note in his collection is a portrait of George Washington estimated as being worth $100,000.

The monsignor will turn 93 in December but age matters little to a man of his simplicity, energy (he still drives his own car) and devotion.

He is as ageless as a work of art.

Hickey's art sale Friday

There will be a little something for everyone this Friday and Saturday as a portion of Monsignor Edward Hickey's art collection goes on sale in the City of Plymouth.

More than 250 works, ranging from portraits to landscapes and religious works, will be on display from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Mayflower Meeting House.

The two-day event is open to the public and there is no charge to view the works.

Each work of art will be individually priced, ranging from as little as $20 to more than $400. The prices will be open to negotiation.

Later this year, or some time next year, further works from the Hickey collection will be auctioned off at Schmidt's Antiques in Ypsilanti.

Schmidt's is hosting the sale at the Mayflower.

Christmas Open House

It's that time of year again to deck the halls and celebrate the holidays. You're invited to enjoy a cup of cheer while taking in the sights, sounds and fragrances of a most happy season.

Last week as thousands of parents stood in line to talk to teachers, I realized it was the last time I would be going to parent-teacher conferences. A lot of mixed feelings hit me with that realization.

Wait a minute, I'm not old enough to not have to deal with teachers and who says my little kid is old enough to deal with teachers and others without my help? I think this is the first of many steps I will be taking during the next year as my youngest goes through his senior year, graduation and onto college.

After 15 years of attending parent teacher conferences, I guess it's time to let someone else wait in line to visit with a teacher. I think I'm going to miss seeing some friends (teachers and other parents) but I'm sure I can get used to it.

I've been fortunate over the years in that most of my talks with teachers have been good. Either a kid talked too much or was too quiet and shy. One kid went through part of a marking period without doing any homework, but she quickly learned the consequences both at home and at school. Thank heavens a high school English teacher cared enough to set up a schedule and help her get caught up. That was the kid that went through elementary and middle school with hardly any hassles.

Actually both of the kids have managed (so far) to get through their classes one way or another. Although there are times when I wonder, I do think the kids have learned a thing or two.

I've enjoyed getting to know who the teachers are. When a kid comes home everyday talking about a certain teacher, whether good or bad, it's nice to know who he's talking about. You never know -- you might agree with the kid that the teacher really is a jerk.

However, after being involved with this school district for 15 years, we've only had to deal with a couple of rotten teachers. For some reason, some schools seem to get more than their share. Of the two teachers I really disliked in the district, one is no longer and the other has moved up to the high school. There's no doubt in my mind that he is just as glad that I am that we don't have to deal with each other.

There are a lot of good teachers in our schools. Maybe we should take the time to tell them how much we appreciate what they are doing for our kids.

After a five or 10 minute conference we parents tend to judge a teacher's abilities. Isn't it scary to think they might be judging us at the same time? Wow, I'm glad I don't have to go through this anymore.

Robert Blaise Delaney

He was a champion of freedom of speech cases, having represented both the case where a young Plymouthite was arrested for selling an "underground" newspaper without a City of Plymouth license and also the Schoolcraft College "dirty words" free speech case. He also served as attorney for The Community Crier for a dozen years, including on the successful suit against Plymouth City Hall during the City Commission's firing of former City Manager Fred Yockey and hiring of Henry Graper.

But to many, he was the commodore of the Tonquish Creek Yacht Club. The boatless group was a tongue in cheek gag Delaney used to counter what he thought was a stuffy "preserve Plymouth in its own image" air about town. At one time it boasted nearly 1,000 members.

Delaney also owned an impressive rock and mineral collection, a large library and a sizable tool shop -- all of which were used both to educate youngsters and to provide the setting for late-night philosophical discussions on everything from law to astronomy and repairing kitchen sinks.

He is survived by his wife, Joanne, of Plymouth Township; his father, Frank, of New York city; son, Stuart, of Livonia; daughter, Cornelia Johnson, of Geneva, NY; daughter Barbara Delaney-Haarstad, of Minneapolis, MN; stepdaughters Julie Furgiuele, of Heath, OH, and Leslie Land, of Berkley; stepson David Gasaway, of Plymouth; two sisters, Patricia Delaney and Diedre Bannon, both of Princeton, NJ; and four grandsons.

Visitation will be held tonight from 5 to 9 p.m. at Schrader Funeral Home in Plymouth. Memorial Services will be held on Thursday, Nov. 13, at 1 p.m. at Schrader Funeral Home. Memorial contributions can be made in care of The Robert Delaney Memorial Fund, 747 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth, MI 48170.

EXOTIC MICRONESIA

Micronesia is an area in the Pacific, consisting of many small islands and lots and lots of ocean. A trip to the area has a great deal to offer the tourist who has progressed beyond the travel folder stage. The region is somewhat primitive, it's true, but not all that primitive. Many of the islands have regular air service and excellent tourist hotels. Perhaps the best way to describe it is to say that this area is much like the South Seas -- particularly Tahiti -- must have been a century ago.

Tourists who require a nightclub atmosphere with something going on every minute, will probably not be able to appreciate the strange and wonderful charm of Micronesia, but many others can and do. If you are interested in gourmet cuisine, Micronesia is also not the place, though food is fresh and adequate. No, the reasons to go there are the natural beauty, the friendly people, the peace, and a very real sense of "getting away from it all."

Our 30 years experience assures you of the finest travel service available. And, best of all, THERE IS NO CHARGE TO YOU FOR OUR SERVICES. We are reimbursed in commission fees by the airlines and hotels, ships and resorts that we book.

P-C Schools consider changing review process

BY KEN VOYLES

The Plymouth-Canton Community school District is currently looking at ways to deal with a flood of complaints from Diane Daskalakis over instructional materials being used by teachers in the district.

Last week Daskalakis filed seven more complaints with the administration, bringing to a total of nine complaints she has filed since the start of this school year.

Besides complaints against the use of the films "The Breakfast Club," and "The Sword and the Sorcerer," Daskalakis is now demanding the district review three more movies, two books, an excerpt from a book and the use of a Ouija board in a classroom.

The movies are "Ghostbusters," "Excalibur," and "Teen Wolf," while the books are "Introduction to Zen Buddhism," and "Rules for Radicals."

Daskalakis contends in the complaints that all of the materials are anti-Christian and contain forms of devil worship.

Complaints

According to the district's policies and procedures manual, a separate review committee of five people must be formed to study each complaint before a recommendation is made to the administration for action to halt the use of the material or allow it to continue.

"We might be able to batch the complaints," Community Relations spokesperson Richard Egli suggested.

"and let one committee look at all the movies for example."

Egli said the schools might also consider forming a permanent committee to review all future complaints instead of forming them on a case-by-case basis.

A third possibility mentioned is to form a committee to first screen complaints to see if they are valid before following through with a review group.

School Board Vice-President David Artley said, "We have to give people an avenue for complaining. We can't just brush them off."

Another suggestion, raised by a resident at Monday's regular meeting of the board, was to force Daskalakis, at least, to use Federal court as her forum.

"Let her put her money where her mouth is," he suggested to the board during the citizen's comments portion of the agenda. "The board has to uphold the cause of academic freedom for the students."

Cantonites start new homes group

BY DAN NESS

The Homeowners' Advisory Council of Canton is off and running.

The group was formed recently to "maintain and improve the quality of life," in Canton, according to Vic Gustafson, the council's spokesman.

"It's not a knee-jerk or shoot-from-the-hip organization," Gustafson said. The council is made up of representatives from different Canton subdivisions, and its organizers hope to have all neighborhoods represented eventually.

Gustafson said the group has met twice so far, and because of the enthusiastic turnout, would be meeting within the next two weeks. "It was most heartening to see the response to that first meeting," Gustafson said.

"Even in the first couple of meetings, interchanges have gone on between the association presidents that, from a functional point of view, have been very enlightening," he said.

Gustafson said about two-thirds of Canton's estimated 22 homeowner's associations were represented at the first two meetings. He compared the council to business or trade organizations, where groups are formed around common interests.

Gustafson stressed that the group was not formed to make a show of force at township board meetings. "It's not any kind of brick-bat organization at all," he said. "We're not out to hunt heads at all. It's not a political organization -- period."

Homeowner association representatives who have not been contacted but wish to become involved in the Homeowners' Advisory Council of Canton can call Gustafson at 455-4189.

getting down to business

Getting out of the heat

If you can't stand the heat...

After spending all of his life in the heating business Robert Erdelyi recently decided it was time to get out and take it easy for a while.

Last June the owner of Robert Erdelyi Heating and Sheetmetal, retired and turned the reigns of the Plymouth business over to Dave and Duane Wilkins, who both worked for Erdelyi for many years.

"I just decided enough was enough, I'd been in the business all my life and wanted to relax," Erdelyi said.

At the age of 18 he began in the heating business with his father, who opened up shop in 1932, and being born and raised in Plymouth it seemed natural that he carry on the family business.

And in doing so, Erdelyi has seen a lot of downtown come and go, making his business as one of Plymouth's oldest.

"I remember doing work for Daisy Rifle and for the Mayflower Hotel, we were not well known up town, but we did a lot of work through the city," he said.

Today, the shop located on Goldsmith, is being run and operated by the Wilkin brothers, but Erdelyi still expects to drop by every once in a while.

Wade-Trim goes to Tampa

The Wade-Trim Group announced that it has purchased the remaining outstanding stock in The Stewart Corporation-Engineers, gaining complete ownership of the Tampa-based company.

Wade-Trim Group and The Stewart Corporation-Architects jointly established the engineering firm more than 2½ years ago. The Tampa firm's new name, Wade-Trim, Inc., reflects the change in ownership.

The Wade-Trim Group, a full service multi-disciplined engineering and architectural design firm based in Plymouth, owns four additional firms in Michigan.

Keen promotion

Kathleen Keen was recently appointed associate administrator for Ambulatory Services at Oakwood Hospital, according to David Ippel, assistant vice president for Ambulatory Services.

Keen's responsibilities include the operations of Oakwood's emergency department and outpatient center at the Canton Health Center, the PCHA Health Center in Trenton and Belleville Family Medical Center.

Keen, a Plymouth resident, has held several positions within the People's Community Hospital Authority at both the central administrative office in Wayne and at Annapolis Hospital. Her most recent position was that of assistant director for shared services.

Keen received her master's degree in health services administration from the University of Michigan and her bachelor of science degree in biology and chemistry from Madonna College.

Parents unite for responsible parties

BY KEN VOYLES

Parents at Centennial Education Park (CEP) are attempting to band together to establish some guidelines by which school district parents can better supervise their high school students.

A CEP "registry" will eventually be published, according to Gerald Ostoin, area coordinator at Salem High.

The registry is designed as a directory listing those parents willing to abide by a specific set of guidelines when hosting parties in their homes, according to Ostoin.

"We've taken this to the parent coffees and gotten relatively positive feedback," Ostoin said. "We're hopeful it will catch on here."

Ostoin said the CEP registry will be patterned after a successful program in the Ann Arbor schools.

"The scenario is a student says 'I'm going to a party,'" said Ostoin. "The parent can then check the registry to see if the host parents subscribe to the guidelines established."

The registry guidelines were established by parents and district administrators.

The guidelines state that parents will not "permit drugs or alcohol to be consumed during student parties hosted in our home."

Parents will also "ensure that proper adult supervision" will be provided for the parties as well as welcome parent inquiries about party specifics such as date, time and invitations.

Ostoin said he hopes the guidelines and the use of a parent registry would promote "positive and substance free parties."

The guidelines were taken from ones written for the Ann Arbor program.

Townships may send sewage to Ypsi nesday stated, in a vote, that they were "very interested" in having the three communities join their system, according to Canton Trustee Loren Bennett.

Plymouth Township Clerk Esther Hulsing said she believed joining YCUA would benefit everyone concerned.

"I think this is a matter of taking care of our own," she said. "This system has more of a chance of going through, the equipment is more state-of-the-art, and the water ends up much cleaner. It is just more satisfactory all around."

All three communities agreed that the cost involved could end up being as costly as the Super Sewer project, but at this point, nobody knows how much.

"I really don't know if it (YCUA) will be cheaper, but Detroit keeps finding places to add more money to our bill. This should be simple and straightforward," Hulsing said.

Heintz stressed that this agreement does not rule out the possibility of joining Super Sewer in the future.

"This is just another option that we

They were studied and approved by the substance abuse committee, which is made up of teachers and administrators.

As for a target date for publication, Ostoin said it was just too early to tell.

"It depends on how many responses we get," Ostoin said.

Ostoin said he is shooting for 100 per cent participation but added that that may be an unrealistic projection at this time.

want to explore, we have not voted out of that project," she said.

Bennett agreed. "There are other options that are available to us," Bennett said. The most likely of the other options would be the construction of a retention basin to handle Canton's excess flow of sewer and rain water, which occurs in times of heavy rains, Bennett said.

The YCUA system is running, at approximately 45 per cent capacity, without the three communities. YCUA officials have indicated to officials of the three communities that their sewage flow into the system would not be in excess of capacity.

Canton Supervisor James Poole had claimed the DNR's warnings of a sewer ban were merely attempts to get Canton to reverse and join Son of Super Sewer, along with 15 other communities. Poole also had said that the DNR was picking on Canton by pointing to the township's emergency pumping system as a source of Rouge River pollution. Poole said other communities were polluting the river much worse.

"In our estimation, Canton has a special problem, and we want to help them find a solution," Guyer said. He denied "picking on" Canton over other communities, but added that Canton's sewer system "is the one our folks feel most concerned about."

Officials from Northville, Canton and Plymouth townships have tentatively scheduled a meeting with YCUA officials to tour the Ypsilanti system Thursday.

Hotels

minutes from that spot, and it's almost mind-boggling," he said. "It spells a good hotel site."

"They (hotels) chase the traveller, that's the essence of it," Nicholson said. Canton, as a young community, has experienced the rapid expansion of other types of facilities in the past, Nicholson said. "There are as many hotels looking for space right now as there were churches looking for space five years ago," he said.

"We have just simply gotten to the point in the cycle of development where hotels are 'it,'" Nicholson said.

Some of the members of the Plymouth-Canton Cruisers Swim Club take a moment off from their weekend workout. The local swim club has done much to help the varsity swim programs at both Canton and Salem.

According to one Cruisers coach the young swimmers "eat, drink and sleep swimming." (Crier photo by Kelly Sauter)

Cruisers eat, drink, sleep swimming

BY MARTY TUNGATE

Ask someone, who are the Cruisers? You might get a shake of the head and a questioning look. They'd probably have little or no idea that the Cruisers are a 110-member youth swimming club right here in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

The Cruisers are made up of young, upcoming swimmers from the Plymouth-Canton School District who range in age from five years old all the way up to 14 years of age.

The club season runs year round starting in September and running through March and includes two different seasons. The months from April to June are used as a practice time for the tankers. There is also a summer league, when the age group range includes swimmers up to 18 year olds.

"It's a great program," said Chuck Olson, who is an advisor for the program and, according to some, the main force behind its success.

"The kids work very hard," he continued. "They eat, drink and sleep swimming."

Four different coaches work with the kids -- Mark Finley, Renee Lakatos, Pam Vanderweele, and Dean Roberts. According to Olson, "They work very hard with the kids, and they put in long hours to help to develop these kids into strong swimmers."

With the youths swimming year around, it might seem obvious that the program would add great strength to the varsity swim teams at Salem and Canton.

"It really helps out my team," said Olson. "It's like a feeder program, about 70 per cent of the kids on my team now went through the Cruisers."

Olson, who is the varsity swimming coach for the Salem girls team, also feels the Cruisers gives the high school tankers added experience when they get to the high school level.

It's an edge that can only help in the long run.

The Cruisers are in a conference with 12 other teams from southeast Michigan, and right now they are swimming in fifth place among the squads, according to Olson.

The Cruisers practice daily and on the weekends at the Salem pool. In fact, Salem is the home base for the organization, which also uses the facilities at Canton.

The swim workouts are demanding, but the harder the club works the more their chances to win improves. Some of the swimmers working out last Saturday -- ages 10 and 11 -- put in such an effort it's not hard to see why the program develops strong swimmers and tough competitors.

John Farrar and Stephanie Long are two members of the outstanding program. They both are in their fourth year as Cruisers and they say they love it.

"It's a lot of work, but it's worth it," Farrar said.

"We are using it as a builder for the future," said Long.

One reason for the club's success is the rapport between the youngsters and their coaches.

"He's a real great guy," said Farrar of his coach Mark Finley. "He deserves a lot of credit."

"It's a lot of work, but it pays off and we have quite a bite of fun at our meets. That is if we do well," said Long.

The Cruisers race in competition at least once a week throughout the year, with a national competition usually in the middle of December.

"We would love to send some of these kids to nationals," Olson said.

The year round nature of the organization helps develop consistency and helps turn fair swimmers into good swimmers. "It's great," Olson said. "We help both high schools."

Tracy Meszaros, Cindy Elliot, and Erin Olson currently swim with Salem's varsity squad. All three girls came through the Cruiser program in recent years.

"We helped them to develop into good swimmers," Olson said.

The Cruisers are in their 10th year of active competition and still going strong. That's thanks in part to a strong support group of parents who work in positions from timers to president of the organization.

Olson said the club should remain for years to come, since it fills a need of providing youngsters with experience and solid swim skills.

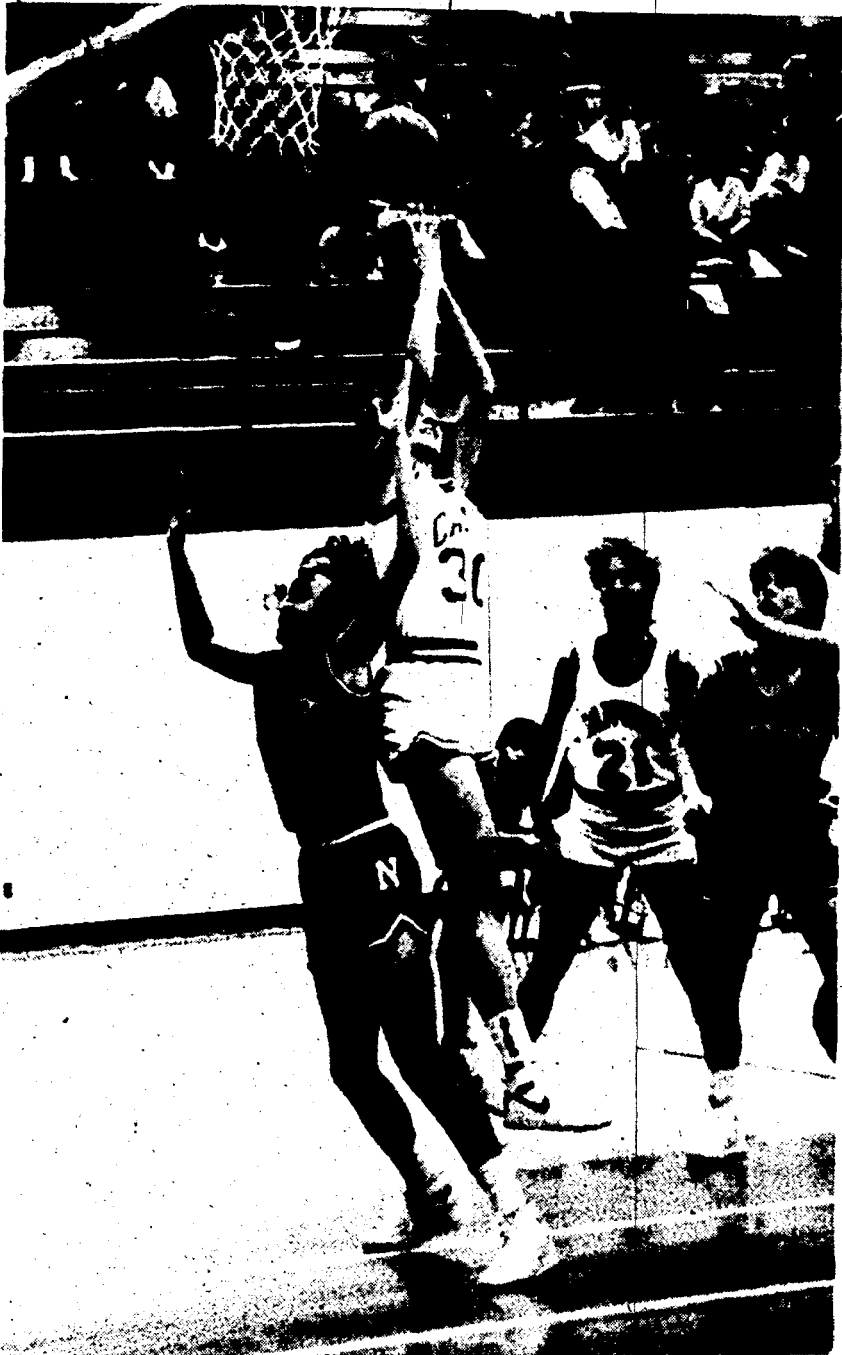

Swimmers on your mark...

Junior cage sign-up

Registration for both boys and girls who plan to play with teams in the Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association (PCJBA) will take place this Saturday, Nov. 15 and again on Wednesday, Nov. 19.

The sign-up is for boys and girls in grades nine through 12 who plan to play for the 'AA' and 'AAA' league teams. It will be held in Canton's Phase III gym lobby.

Registration hours are 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. this Saturday and from 7-9 p.m. next Wednesday.

Chief cagers tune up for tourney clash

BY JANET ARMSTRONG

It's that time of year again. What time of year you ask?

Girls basketball tournament time. Yes, that's right the time of the season when competition is fierce and rivalry is bitter.

The Class A state cage tournament begins on Nov. 20 with districts followed by regionals and then the Class A state finals.

But the Canton basketball team and the Salem basketball aren't quite thinking ahead to the post-season just yet.

For the second straight year the two squads will face each other in the WLAA (Western Lakes Activities Association) league title contest. As you might recall Canton faced Salem last year in the league match-up with Canton coming up with the short end.

Both teams have had very successful regular seasons this fall. Canton is 12-4 in the league, while Salem is 16-0 in league.

"I'm very satisfied with our season.

Our primary goal when the season began was to improve and become a good team by game 20," said Rob Neu Canton's coach.

He added, "This game (Salem versus Canton) will help us in getting ready for the Class A state tournament."

Also helping to get the Chiefs ready for the tournament was their win against the Northville Mustangs last Thursday.

The home contest was Canton's final regular season game of the year.

The Chiefs lost to the Mustangs earlier in the season by the score of 37-32, but rebounded with a victory, beating the Mustangs soundly, 38-23.

Tory Barger and Karen Boluch led the Chiefs scoring and overall each pitched in 10 points.

So it would seem that Canton is prepared for the Class A state tournament and for the Rocks.

The WLAA title game will be played at the Salem gym this Friday. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m.

WLAA championship on the line

Rock cagers roll on - gear for Chiefs

BY MARTY TUNGATE

Salem's girl cagers got up for their last regular game of the season last Thursday against the highly potent Westland John Glenn Rockets.

The Rocks blew apart the Rockets, 62-37.

"We haven't been up for a game in a while, and the girls were really ready for this one," Salem head coach Fred Thomann said.

The Rocks started off slow against the Rockets and John Glenn took an early lead, 5-0. But then the Rocks came storming back and began pouring it on.

Salem took the lead 31-19 at the intermission.

"We were feeling pretty good about ourselves at the half," Thomann said, "but I told the girls to keep the pressure on, and not to let up."

The Rocks kept the pressure on using a stingy defense and a flowing offense.

"We played a great defensive game," Thomann said. "The whole team played strong defense, but Keri McBride, Stacy Sovine, and Barb Krug played especially well."

The three cagers shut down the Rockets' main offensive weapon, Jenny Oken, allowing her just 10 points.

The Rocks' offensive attack was led by junior forward Dena Head with 31 points. She also had snared eight rebounds to pace her team.

When Head wasn't lighting up the scoreboard it was Jessica Handley's turn. Handley pumped in 17 points for the Rocks, and played strong defense as well.

The Rocks are now at 16-0 in their league, and 18-1 overall. The squad now must get ready for the Western Lakes Activities Association playoffs against rival Canton.

Salem will host the Chiefs this Friday at 7:30 p.m. in a game that has the makings of being a great contest.

Like in football, records mean nothing for these two teams when they meet.

"Canton is a good team, and they can do a lot to hurt you," Thomann said.

Salem won the first meeting between the two clubs earlier in the season by a slim five points.

"We'll have to be better than that this Friday if we hope to beat them," Thomann concluded.

The Rocks and the Chiefs may also run into each other in the district tournament starting next week.

Rock tankers fall to NF; finish with Glenn

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Salem tankers lost a tough duel meet to North Farmington Thursday night, 102-70.

"It was a tough meet for us to lose," said head coach Chuck Olson.

The Rocks were able to capture two individual victories against North Farmington, and that was in diving and the always strong 400-freestyle relay.

Tina Aquino took first place in the diving for the Rocks, with a score of 155.5. "She (Aquino) performed her dives very well, she had a good night," Olson replied.

The other highlight for the lady tankers, was the 400-freestyle relay. An event that the Rocks feel is one of their strong points.

Cindy Elliot, Tracy Meszaros, Dawn Shick, and Heather Bunch were the members of the relay team who captured that title. The relay team finished with a time of 4:05.

"Our freestyle team is good, I think they could swim with anyone in the area," Olson said.

Although the Rocks have yet to qualify anyone for the state final just yet, head coach Chuck Olson feels a few of the girls have a shot at the state meet.

"Aquino has already qualified for regionals, and if she does well there she could go to the state meet," Olson said. "Meszaros, and Elliot also have a chance to make it to the states, that is if they work hard. And it would not surprise me to see our 400-freestyle relay team go all the way as well," said Olson.

The Rocks have one last home meet before the conference preliminaries, (which are also at the Salem pool) and that is against Westland John Glenn. A team that has also had an up and down year.

The Rocks are 5-6 on the season and are looking to finish with an even 6-6 mark after they meet John Glenn. "We can swim with the Rockets," Olson said. "We have a little more depth than they do, we should win the dual meet." Olson concluded.

Going ape for football

The season may be over already but don't tell these diehard football fans. They were spotted at the Salem-Canton grid clash on Halloween night and have yet to remove their colors (or mask). (Crier photo by Steve Culver)

Literacy benefit at Canton

Shoot for literacy.

The Plymouth-Canton Community Literacy Council and Eastern Michigan University's basketball booster club are sponsoring an EMU green and white cage contest at Canton's Phase III gym on Friday, Nov., 14.

The benefit will also include a basketball clinic for ages eight years and older from 6-7:30 p.m., with the game itself slated for 8 p.m.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Advance tickets are available at the Plymouth-Canton Community Education offices at Canton, room 130; at Starkweather Center, 550 north Holbrook; Sunshine Honda; and the Press Box. Tickets can also be purchased at the door.

Proceeds will go to the Community Literacy Council for supplies and the training of its tutors. The council provides volunteer tutors to help those who cannot read.

Prizes will be given away at the contest including a bus trip to East Lansing for a Michigan State University game and reception, Detroit Piston tickets, a basketball signed by all the Pistons, and t-shirts.

Also, at the intermission of the game, those in attendance will have a chance to win a Sunshine Honda, hatchback. A $1 ticket can be purchased at the door for the drawing.

Ten names will be drawn and those 10 will have a chance to shoot from center court for the car.

The council has been active in Plymouth for little more than a year.

Houle shines for MSU

Michigan State University offensive tackle Dave Houle played a key role in the Spartans 52-23 victory over the Minnesota Golden Gophers at the Metrodome two weekends ago.

With Houle's help the offense converted 16 of 22 third downs and totaled 502 offensive yards.

The 52 points MSU racked up were the most in a single game since 1981 when the Spartans rolled over Big Ten foe Northwestern 61-14.

Chiefs swimmers ready to wrap up winning year

BY JANET ARMSTRONG

Another dual meet season for the Canton girls swim team is coming to a close. It can only be considered a successful one for the Chief tankers.

Canton blew Farmington Harrison out of the water last Thursday, beating them by a margin of 124-47.

The win brought the Chiefs record to 8-1 overall and 6-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA).

With one dual meet remaining, and then the post-season competition, Canton still has plenty of time to reach the rest of its goals.

"We want to go to the conference meet and place in at least third," said Canton swim coach Hooker Wellman. "That's our goal."

The Chiefs swam to victory Thursday with 10 first places.

Michelle Stackpoole, Julie Cox, Amy Schmitz, and Sue Schendal combined for a first place in the 200-yard medley relay, while Cassie Cummins swam away with a first in the 200-yard individual medley.

Danielle Dickenson won the 50-yard freestyle. Also successful in a first place bid was Chief diver Lisa DeJong.

Kelly Riche swam for two firsts on the night, one in the 200-yard freestyle. She also took a first, along with Dickenson, Jean McLenaghan, and Cummins in the 400-yard freestyle race.

McLanaghan captured first in 100-yard backstroke, while Val Gildhaus scored first in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Winding up the first place finishes for the Chiefs was Cox in the 100-yard butterfly.

The Chiefs will finish their regular dual meet season against the Northville Mustangs tomorrow, Nov. 13. The 7 p.m. meet will be raced at Northville.

The Chiefs will then compete in the conference meet beginning with preliminaries on Nov. 19 and concluding on Nov. 20-21.

Atwell, Jones represent Rocks at harrier finals

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Salem cross country squad sent two runners to the state finals two weeks ago, and came away with a new school record.

Bill Atwell and Kevin Jones, were the two runners who qualified. Atwell ran a 16:43 for the day, while Jones finished with a 16:52 at the regional. The times, which was Jones' best time of the season qualified both Atwell and Jones for the state meet.

At the Class A state championship Bill Atwell broke the Rock's school record for cross country with a time of 16:21.

"Bill told me that he was ready to run today," said first-year coach Geoff Baker. This record running time placed him 22nd overall at the state meet.

Jones, who also competed at the state competition, finished 64th, with a time of 17:10.

Jones who is a senior was "happy to qualify for the state meet," according to Baker.

On the other hand, Atwell is only a junior, and will be around for one more year.

"He's (Atwell) a real strong runner," Baker said. "And with the proper work and guidance he could very well finish in the top 15 in the state meet next year."

Baker is in his first year as coach for the Rock leggers, and he is looking for bigger and better things to come from his squad's in the future.

"We have a lot of young runners, who could develop into strong runners for our team," Baker concluded.

It was an "up and down" year for the Rocks, but with the return of Atwell for one more year, could help develop Salem into a highly competitive team in the Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA).

Racquet league

Canton's Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring its winter Racquetball League for men beginning on Wednesday, Dec. 3 at Rose Shores Racquetball in Canton.

The 11-week league is divided into divisions based on player abilities. Matches are played each Wednesday at 7:30.

The cost is $64 and includes all league court time and awards.

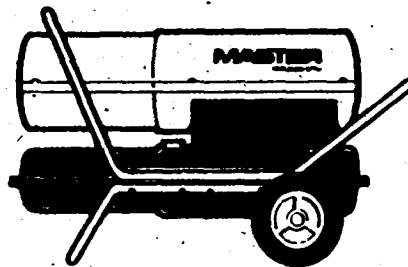

A league organizational meeting is slated for the first night of play.

Canton board considers landfill expansion

BY DAN NESS

The Canton Board of Trustees will consider a proposal Wednesday night from Wayne Disposal-Canton, Inc. to expand its current waste landfill, at the southwest corner of Michigan Avenue and Lilley Road.

The Canton Planning Commission voted not to recommend approval of the expansion at its Oct. 27 meeting. If the Board of Trustees votes not to recommend the expansion, Wayne Disposal-Canton could appeal the decision in front of the Wayne County Solid Waste Implementation Committee.

If the board votes not to recommend, 29 of the 43 communities in Wayne County could override the vote and approve the project, according to planning commissioner Loren Bennett.

"My first desire is not to have it," said Bennett, who voted against approval in the planning commission. But, if the landfill expansion were approved, Bennett said he would like to see the township get something out of the deal, such as a tipping fee for users of the landfill or free dumping for the township.

Wayne Disposal-Canton representatives have said that the deep clay layer at the landfill site would provide an excellent protection against contamination of water supplies. Bennett said the clay layer is what the township should use as a bargaining chip if the landfill is approved eventually.

"Our resource is our thick clay," Bennett said. "It's a resource for the community to market."

The expansion would cover 106 acres of property.

Civitan essay contest

Get out those pens and pencils; turn on your typewriters and word processors.

It's time once again for the 8th annual Civitan Citizenship Essay competition, sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club.

This year's theme -- a unanimous choice of the selection committee -- is "Censorship in Education: Its Impact on Student and Society."

The contest opens this Saturday, Nov. 15 and extends through March 15, 1987.

The essays will be judged by an eight-member panel including three Canton English and/or Social Studies teachers, three Salem English and/or Social Studies teachers and one representative each from The Community Crier and the Plymouth Observer.

All high school students, regardless of grade or class, who are currently full time enrollees in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, are eligible to compete.

Eligibility also includes all private or parochial high school students within the geographic boundaries of the school district.

The first prize winner will receive $125, while the second place writer gets $75. Third place is worth $50.

To encourage greater participation, Civitan will add an additional $25 at each level for every extra block of five participants.

Civitan sponsors the essay competition to help students strengthen their writing in the following ways:

- Develop a theme concept and present it in a convincing manner.
- Gain experience or expertise in documenting controversial information.
- Develop opening and closing statements.
- Summarize and draw conclusions.
- Improve individual research skills.
- Expand vocabulary and apply the rules of grammar.
- Utilize accepted procedures of footnoting and bibliographic notation.
- Gain a broader sense of the responsibilities of citizenship.

Students who may have specific questions or who desire further information should contact Joe Henshaw, essay contest chairman, at Canton (451-6600, ext. 321) or at 453-7569.

Teacher's appeal denied

BY KEN VOYLES

A Plymouth-Canton Community Schools teacher who was suspended from his duties more than a decade ago, was denied the application for leave to appeal recently by the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

The case of Jack Marts versus the State Tenure Commission and the Plymouth-Canton School District began back in 1971 when the instructor was suspended by the district under the teacher tenure act.

Marts lost an appeal before the State of Michigan Court of Appeals in May of this year when that court "overwhelmingly" supported an earlier decision by the State Tenure Commission to affirm his discharge from the school district.

The instructor then filed an application to appeal before the state Supreme Court but was denied because the court was "not persuaded that the questions presented should be reviewed by this court."

"That application for leave to appeal (before the State Supreme Court) is essentially the end of the line," said Tom Farrell, information officer at the court.

Farrell said all applications for leave to appeal are reviewed by the court but most are denied. Of nearly 2,500 applications of appeal each year the state Supreme Court accepts less than 10 per cent of those, according to Farrell.

He added that the court does not have to issue a reason for the denial.

Now...from Monroe to Petoskey...you can put your money in the helpful hands of Heritage Bank.

Heritage Federal Savings Bank and Family Federal Savings have joined together and this growing strength means a lot of good things for you.

Our assets now total over $900,000,000. To put that in perspective—Heritage is one of Michigan's largest federal savings banks—and we're still growing.

You can take advantage of that strength at 47 Heritage Bank locations now, from Monroe to Petoskey. At each Heritage location, you'll find the courteous, competent help Heritage Bank is known for. You'll also find services you value, from mortgages and checking accounts to consumer and commercial loans to IRA's.

As important as size is in financial strength, that's not the only advantage you'll enjoy. You'll benefit from Heritage Bank's fifty-two years of strong financial management as well.

Stop in soon at your local Heritage office and put your money in the helpful hands of Heritage.
